Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breathe, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

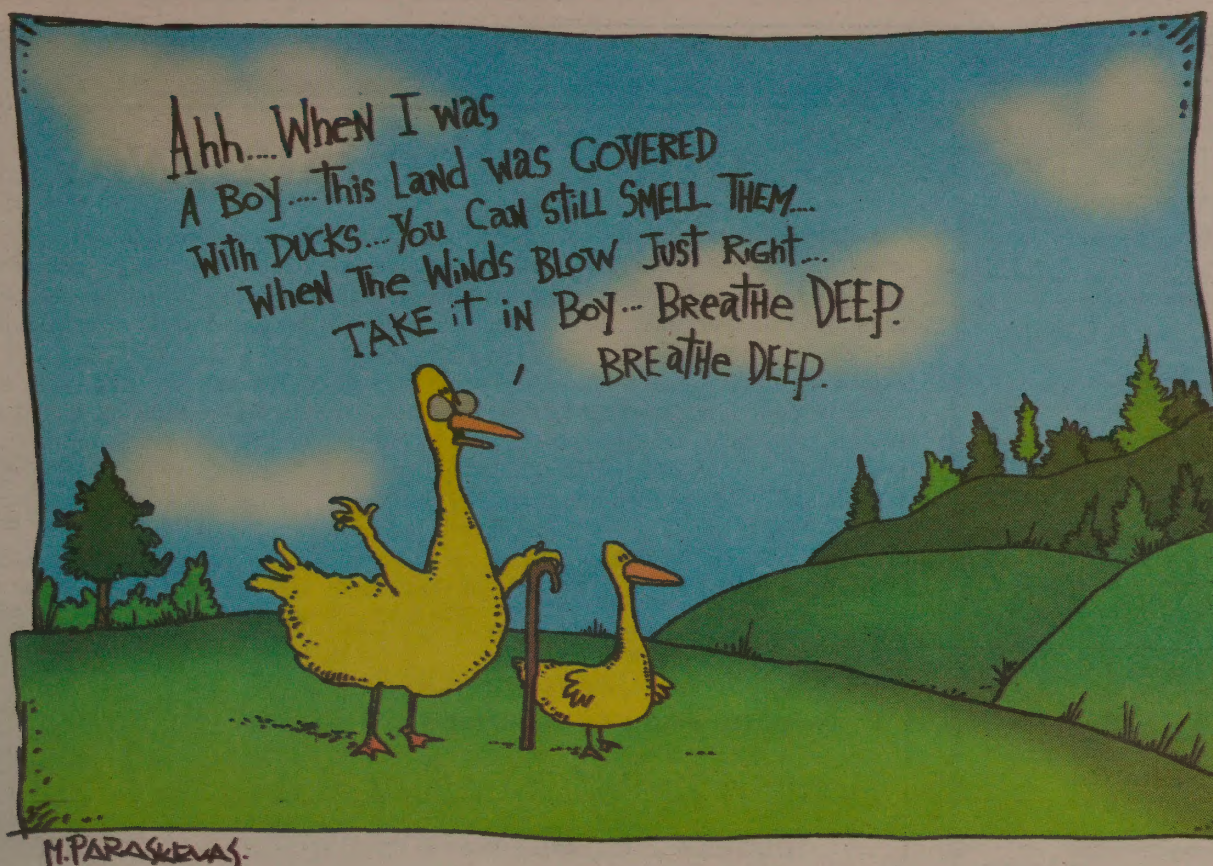

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

D--K WALK

The Duck Walk Vineyard In Southampton Is Being Pressed To Change Its Name

By Dan Rattiner

Duck Walk Vineyard in Southampton may have to undergo a change of name if a legal matter with Duckhorn Vineyards in Napa Valley, California, is decided in the West Coast winery's favor. Duckhorn Vineyards is named after Dan Duckhorn, who founded it twenty-five years ago. The Duck Walk Vineyard in Southampton is owned by Dr. Herodotus Damianos, and Duckhorn's attorneys have alleged that using the word "duck" in the East End winery's name, infringes on the trademark Duckhorn — which apparently is known far and wide throughout the world for its high quality wines, especially Merlot. Because Dan Duckhorn feels that the word "duck," aside from being part of his name, represents a franchise that he has worked long and hard to develop, he tries to stop all other vintners from possibly cashing in on that success. A trial about Duck Walk will be held in the spring.

How anybody can think the name "Duck" is theirs and not anybody else's, is certainly odd, if you ask me, particularly here on Long Island where for many years there were literally dozens of duck farms producing the famous Long Island Duck. The Long Island Ducks hockey team (and baseball team) got named after all the ducks here. In the 1930s, a duck farmer in Flanders — still home to the famous foul today — built "The Big Duck," a building in the shape of a duck which has become a national monument, listed on both the State and National Registers of Historic Places.

The specific breed of duck that was the tastiest, the one raised in the highest quantities on Long Island, and the one most prized in restaurants around the country, was the Pekin Duck, often mistakenly called Peking Duck, which actually refers to the traditional Chinese dish made from Pekin ducks. The dish was named after the capitol of China, which was called Peking by westerners for a thousand years or more until about twenty years ago when sharp ears realized that the name of the city, as pronounced by the Chinese people, really sounded more like Beijing. Today, English speaking people call the capital of China Beijing the number of duck farms on Long Island precipitously declined. The reason for this is, or was, duck pollution. Raising ducks is a very — how shall I put this — smelly, noisy, dusty and awful or offal business. Duck farms and high population areas do not mix well. And that is why, not too many years ago, practically all the ducks produced as the famous Long Island Pekin Duck, were raised on the East End. I believe there were about thirty duck farms on the East End back in the 1950s, many of them based in Eastport, which billed itself as THE LONG ISLAND DUCK CAPITAL OF THE WORLD. There are people still around today who remember when the Sunrise Highway was only built as far west as Eastport, and in your car you just got dumped off the Sunrise onto a spur that would take you to the Montauk Highway for the twisty end of your trip out east, and you would have to drive carefully to keep from hitting ducks that would skitter across the road. There were white feathers and dander in the air. And your nose would tell you you were in THE LONG ISLAND DUCK CAPITAL OF THE WORLD.

But I digress.

How anybody can think the name "Duck" is theirs... is certainly odd, if you ask me, particularly here on Long Island.

out of respect for the Chinese language, but the name of this particular Chinese dish is still called Peking Duck. In fine American restaurants, however, Pekin duck — frequently accompanied by orange sauce — is usually referred to as Long Island Duck.

Of course, all this is old news. As the eastern end of Long Island became more and more populous,

There are those who say that what is now the Duck Walk Vineyard was at one time a duck farm, but that is not true. What is now the Duck Walk Vineyard used to be a potato farm until about 1980 when Alan Barr, a nightclub owner with a dream of creating a winery on the South Fork, decided to build a Norman-style chateau surrounded by vine-

South O' the Highway (and the North too)

Jeffrey Potter of East Hampton wrote a book about his late friend Jackson Pollock some years ago, but the film Pollock starring Ed Harris that came out last year was based on another book on Pollock by Steven Naifeh and Gregory White Smith. Now comes another book, this one a work of fiction by John Updike called Seek My Face just out. It is about a woman named Hope who marries a troubled Abstract Expressionist painter who lived on Long Island and gets killed in a car crash. His name is Zack McCoy, but also in the book are Seamus O'Rourke (Mark Rothko?), Onno de Genoog (Willem de Kooning?) and maybe Hope Ouder Kirk is Lee Krasner? Anyway, The New York Times panned Updike's newest offering. "It's impossible for the reader to find a single believable character in Seek My Face," wrote critic Michiko Kakutani.

Kimora Lee Simmons of East Hampton sent 50 Baby Phat designer jackets to friends the other day and there was Madonna in London wearing one of them. Former Spice Girl Victoria Beckham saw the pic and called Kimora Lee and ordered one for herself.

East Hampton's Steven Spielberg is in Havana meeting with Cuban artists. He spent eight hours with Fidel. By Fidel standards, that's a short meeting.

Peter Boyle, who once got into a fight in front of the Amagansett Farmers Market about a parking space, had the unforgettable experience of having an Avenue in Manhattan shut down by the Mayor for him. The "Everybody Loves Raymond" star was filmed test driving a Ford Mustang Mach 1 on Eleventh Avenue last Thursday afternoon for a segment on "Extra."

Polo player Peter Brant of Bridgehampton and his supermodel wife Stephanie Seymour hosted a party for Kenny Scharf, the graffiti artist, to celebrate the launch of his new animated show on the Cartoon Network. The party was at Lucky Cheng's on Monday and attending were Nicole Miller, Patrick McMullan, Lenny Kravitz (all with their kids), and many other Hamptonsites.

Great story in the November 8 Metro section of The New York Times about Muriel F. Siebert, the first woman to get a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. It's the feature in the section "Public Lives."

yards on the property. The chateau which Barr built and which is standing today is a first rate replica of such a place, complete with copper roof and beautiful brickwork done in the French renaissance style, but after it was completed he owed everybody a lot of money, had very few customers, and he got out of town. I might note that his dream included a large artificial pond, which he dug on the property and filled with water — he planned to have ice skating there in the wintertime — that is today a large depression in the earth to the east of the winery building which, empty of water, just seems to be a rolling hill of some sort. The winery was called Le Reve. (The Dream. Get it?)

Upon Barr's departure, Le Reve was taken over by a bank, Barclay's, and Australian winemaker Russell Hearn made some respectable wines under trying circumstances until, several years after that, Dr. Damianos, who also owns Pindar Vineyard on the North Fork, purchased the property. Slowly and meticulously, which is the only way to create good wine at a vineyard, the quality of the crops was built up, the name was changed to Duck Walk and it has become the success it is today.

There WAS a duck farm not far from the Duck Walk Vineyard, however. Duck Walk Vineyard is at the western entrance to Water Mill and if you go through Water Mill to the eastern end of it, on the south side of the road you will come to a condominium complex called Mecox Landing, which sits at the headwaters of Mecox Bay. The bay comes just about all the way up to the Montauk Highway at this point, although you cannot see that from the highway today because the owners of Mecox Landing built a big berm separating the end of their condominium property from the highway. It was known as the Bellini Duck Farm then, and if you liked the experience of feathers, dander, ducks quacking and all the odors you could go there and get yourself a fresh killed duck for dinner. If you wanted to, and few people did want to, you could go in the back and watch them wring those little ducks' necks. Or you could just stay out front anyway, the Bellini Duck Farm fronted right on the Montauk Highway (this was pre-berm) and in any case, even if you didn't want to buy a duck you could pull over and show the kids all the ducks running around behind the turkey wire fence there. They made quite a commotion. People threw breadcrumbs at them.

I don't want to make too much of this because sometimes the less said about something, the better, but this past week, one of the few remaining duck farms on the East End, the Jurgielewicz Duck Farm in Moriches, got a summons for having too many ducks on the farm.

I should explain here, and this explains why where the winery is today could never have been a duck farm. The way they raised ducks in the old days was to have them in a big pen that was half on land and half in the bay. The rise and fall of the tide in the bay would wash out the offal of all the ducks in a kind of natural way and that made duck farming possible. Since the waters of Mecox Bay never went across the Montauk Highway where Duck Walk Vineyard is today, there could never have been a duck farm there, even before the land was in potatoes.

The Problem Of Families Living In One Room Motel Units Year Round

By Dan Rattiner

There is such a thing in a small town called "balance." There are rich people, poor people, middle-class people, tourists. And a lot of what is going on today in such communities as Southampton, Hampton Bays, Amagansett and Montauk is about that balance.

I am not going to suggest that every community out here should have the same proportion of people from all walks of life as every other town. Although Amagansett is a town of well-to-do summer people and few poor people for example, Montauk is a place with a high percentage of tourists and visitors. The tiny hamlet of Tuckahoe in Southampton, on the other hand, has a high percentage of middle-class families with children in the local school.

This is not to say that proportions cannot change, and, in some cases, even be encouraged to change. But at the present time, things are happening in Tuckahoe and Montauk that have upset a lot of people from those places who have demanded, in turn, that local officials do something or, if they can't, change local laws so they can. The residents of the Tuckahoe School District even filed a lawsuit last week against Suffolk County, trying to hold them accountable for what is happening.

The Montauk situation is a bigger problem, but one that is kind of creeping up on the community. It seems to have crossed a line.

Montauk, for as long as anyone can remember, has been a world unto itself. A narrow, long peninsula, it has been a seasonal community of fishing, beach going and vacationing people, where visitors from all over the world come, stay in motels or condominiums, and enjoy themselves. The staffs of these facilities used to be the family members of the people who owned the restaurants, motels and attractions, and they lived on the premises. But in recent years that has changed. Help today is made up of largely Hispanic or Irish people that live in some of the less successful small motels that rent rooms out for the tourist season. These are small, cramped quarters, never designed for long-term living. But the Town, aware of the housing problem for the help, has let it happen. After all, nobody wants to evict people from where they live, even if the units are small. In many other cultures, people live in close quarters and think nothing of it. And if the truth be told, the number of people living in these conditions in Montauk is quite small, when compared to the whole.

Also, Montauk is enriched by the influx of people from different cultures. Downtown in the summertime, particularly in the evening, the streets are filled with people who speak one of several different languages. And with the smell of the sea in the air it, is a vibrant, alive place filled with energy and excitement.

The trouble comes, however, when you look at the problems in the Hamptons involving real estate prices and the working-class. The Hamptons, which have a population about ten times that of Montauk, have a large, relatively new wealthy class living in homes with manicured lawns that have a great need for pool people, landscapers, painters, carpenters, plumbers, electricians and so forth and so on. With the real estate prices through the roof, however, there are few places where hard working blue-collar workers can live in the area. Many of the local working people who owned homes have, for family reasons or other reasons, moved away. Invariably, although they have left with a pocketful of money, their old family homesteads are fixed up (or torn down!) and rebuilt by wealthy New Yorkers in need of the very service people whose houses they have picked up. More and more, the service people who work here have to come in from out of the area, particularly from the west, or "up island." There is a huge traffic jam, called the Trade Parade, coming into the Hamptons on the Sunrise Highway every weekday morning now.

The problem, in Montauk anyway, is that larger and larger numbers of these people have taken up residence in the motels in Montauk to the east of the Hamptons. They live in Montauk year round in these motels, but they work in the Hamptons and have their own commute. More and more of them are coming, and because they can pay rent twelve months a year, they are crowding out the housing possibilities for the seasonal help. The numbers involved in this, from Montauk's perspective, are huge. And they are shifting the balance in a way that is unacceptable in a resort community. As I am sure you know, resort communities can be very fragile. When people go on vacation they want to relax, they want to feel safe. In many ways, they want to feel they are among people like themselves. And if what they find when they get there does not fit that description, they leave the place in a hurry. Resort communities can collapse this way. We all know many that have.

From Montauk's perspective, therefore, there is great concern that the Hamptons, instead of taking care of the needs of their own, will see Montauk as a dumping ground for its blue-collar workers. It is interesting to note that in a recent real estate report about prices and number of sales in communities on the East End, during the period of June to September of this year there were huge increases in every category in every community in the Hamptons, while Montauk suffered a decline in the number of homes sold as well as a decline in the average price that they sold for. It was a striking contrast and it is what has brought the community leaders of Montauk to East Hampton Town Hall to protest what is going on in their community. It is important to note that in 1985, when laws were passed that would allow the working-class to occupy some of the motel units, other laws were passed that simply stopped all resort development in Montauk in its tracks. The good people of East Hampton, in whose township the hamlet of Montauk is located, didn't think much of allowing Montauk's tourist industry to grow after 1985. And they have never looked back.

It is interesting to note that at the same time during the same week that Montauk residents were expressing their concerns, a huge tract of land in Amagansett that was earmarked for affordable housing, where working people and elderly people might live, was suddenly pulled away from that agenda by its owner, Richard Principi, Jr., because it would appear that for various bureaucratic reasons, it might take four or five more years to come about. He paid a lot for this property four years ago, and he cannot wait for that. So now he has announced that he will be developing homes and horse stables for wealthy people on the site. More well-to-do property in need of the services of the working class.

"There will be horses on this property by next fall," he said.

And more pressure on the Montauk motels to house those that groom them.

Through all of this there is the question — is the Montauk tourist community worth saving? Surely it is worth asking. I think most people would answer that with a resounding "yes." In the last fifteen years, vast numbers of acreage in Montauk have been bought up and turned into state or county parks. The saved acreage equals probably half the whole land area. The peninsula is surely protected from rampant tourism by this point. The question now is — are people to be allowed into the equation to vacation there and enjoy it? Or is Montauk to collapse into inadequate housing for blue-collar workers who need a place to live while they work next door in the Hamptons?

It is my opinion that the stringent laws restricting the enlargement and development of motels and hotels in Montauk be relaxed so that the community can grow. And at the same time, new laws should be passed that allow only the motels that have already been converted to continue. No new motel conversions. Or conversions that limit the rentals to just seasonal use. The Town should also consider allowing people to rent out apartments in their homes. Throughout the town, in Amagansett and Springs and Wainwright and everywhere else, those less financially fortunate could find places to live scattered throughout the community — which is, I think, far better than creating ghettos of public housing where Lance Who?

One Of My Best Friend's Sons Accosts Me On The Street In New York

By Dan Rattiner

So I am walking west on 44th Street between Fifth and Sixth when I hear a voice call out to me. I look up. There is a handsome, friendly man of about forty standing there. He's a light-skinned African American with freckles. And he's smiling at me. He's apparently been calling me for awhile.

"Hey, didn't you hear me when I called out to you?"

I stop. "No," I say. "Sometimes I'm lost in thought."

He laughs. "Then why are you talking to me now?"

"Well, I finally heard you."

"It's me, Anthony." I can't quite place him. "You know me. You don't recognize me?"

"I'm sorry. I'm embarrassed. I know I know you, though."

"I'll give you a hint. Think of the nicest black man that you know. One who's your best friend."

"Junior Brown?"

"No."

"Lance Gumbs?"

"Yes. Lance. That's my dad."

"I didn't recognize you."

"Oh come on. You don't recognize me? I was with him the last time you guys were together."

"Oh yeah. I remember."

"Well, it's me. You heard what happened to Lance?"

"Lance is fine."

"Oh man," he says. He turns away, spins around, then comes back. "When did you last see him?"

"About three weeks ago. Is he all right?"

"Well, he's getting there."

"He was all right three weeks ago."

"That was just before it happened. He had a stroke."

"No."

"I'll give you a hint.

Think of the nicest black man that you know. One who's your best friend."

"Yeah. A bad one."

"But he's so young," I say.

"Well, it took away his speech."

"Where is he now? I've got to talk to him. This is terrible."

"He's in the hospital. Doing rehab. Most of his speech has come back. It's been a miracle."

"You must be very upset. I'm upset. This can't be possible."

"Yeah, I know. But it happened. We're hoping for the best."

"I don't believe this. I just saw him."

"Yeah, you did. Listen, I'm sorry to hold you up. But I just returned a rental car and I came up short. Thought I had it. Could you lend me two bucks?"

I look at him closely. He doesn't look like Lance. And Lance is about forty. "How old are you?"

"I'm thirty two," he says. "Do I look it?"

"Look, I really have to go."

I start walking.

"How far are you goin'?" he asks.

"I have to meet somebody," I say in a clipped voice.

He breaks off walking with me. Goes ahead. Mumbles to nobody, "Two bucks for Lance," and is gone.

I get to where I am going, step into the lobby, and take out my cell phone. I call Lance.

"You okay?" I ask.

"Yeah, why?"

"Somebody said you'd had a stroke and were in the hospital."

"I haven't been in the hospital. I'm fine."

"And you don't have a son named Anthony?"

"Anthony? No. No son by that name."

I'm so glad he's all right. I ask if he's free for dinner next week but he isn't so we make a date for the following Tuesday. I'm looking forward to it.

Thanks Anthony.

all they see are less fortunate people such as themselves.

* * *

The situation in Tuckahoe, and in Shinnecock for that matter, is far simpler, far more painful and immediate, yet far more difficult to resolve. The County of Suffolk last year made a deal to rent out the rooms in some old motels in Shinnecock to house about 45 welfare families. This has been a windfall for the motel owners who up until now have been occasionally evicting people who cannot come up with maybe $49 a day. The county pays $450 a day. And they are dependable.

Meanwhile, the County has signed the leases, sent these welfare families out there, and then sort of just let them fend for themselves. These are rundown motels. The families have no wage earner, either no prospects or limited prospects, and lots of children, all of whom are going to the wonderful, well-scrubbed and high-ranking Tuckahoe Public School nearby. It's been an invasion. These disadvantaged children, living in these deplorable conditions (at taxpayer expense), represent about 10% of the entire enrollment of Tuckahoe. Talk about a change in the balance of things.

The teachers there say these kids are rough, have special needs, limited skills and low motivation. The school was never told they would be receiving them, have received no guidelines, extra funds, extra teachers or training to deal with them and, given that they have little support, encouragement, privacy or study space at home, represent a disruptive force in the community. Their hearts go out to these children. But what to do?

Last week Tuckahoe filed a lawsuit against the County over the way this situation has been handled. People want to help people, but the County's behavior, or negligence in handling this, could bring down a school.

I frankly have no answers to this problem. A community that has no welfare families and no welfare housing cannot cry "Not in My Backyard" about the less fortunate. There is, however, as with Montauk, the matter of balance. Forty-three families — maybe 150 children all together — thrown into a tiny school district is far, far too much to handle all at once.

There is also the matter of $450 a night for a room, 365 days a year, to the motel owners. For this, the motel owners should provide spic and span facilities, round the clock security, a nursery service and a study space. Also recreational facilities. If they don't — and they don't — then I don't get it. To paraphrase Shakespeare, something is rotten in Hauppauge. I'd sure like this sum of money explained to me. I'm a taxpayer. It's my money.

I'm a great believer in ethnic diversity. But I am also a believer in dispersing those less fortunate, in an upscale rural community such as ours, into the mainstream, as long as we do have a dominant mainstream large enough to absorb them. I think Southampton, just as East Hampton, should look into the idea of allowing people to rent apartments in their homes. Times change. People change. Just drifting along obeying old rules is sometimes the worst thing you can do.

Cablevision

Our Cable Monopoly, With Limited Funds, Plays Poker With The Big Boys

By Dan Rattiner

Cablevision, the company that has the monopoly on cable service for practically all of Long Island, has money problems. Under siege from several satellite TV suppliers — DirecTV and EchoStar — and new to the concept of having to deal with competitors, they have made numerous missteps and errors. Last month, Moody's Investors Services, having already lowered the Cablevision stock to junk bond status, lowered Cablevision's liquidity rating to SGL-4, the lowest rating on the chart. This means that among the many companies that Moody rates, Cablevision is down there amongst those between a rock and a hard place.

Moody explained the change in their rating as due to "the high level of both planned and requisite capital spending during the second half of 2002, a good portion of which represents non-core investment activities." Cablevision closed at $8.36 on the day of the announcement, down 82 percent for the year, reaching levels that stockbrokers anxious to sell you some of it would call "an excellent time to buy in."

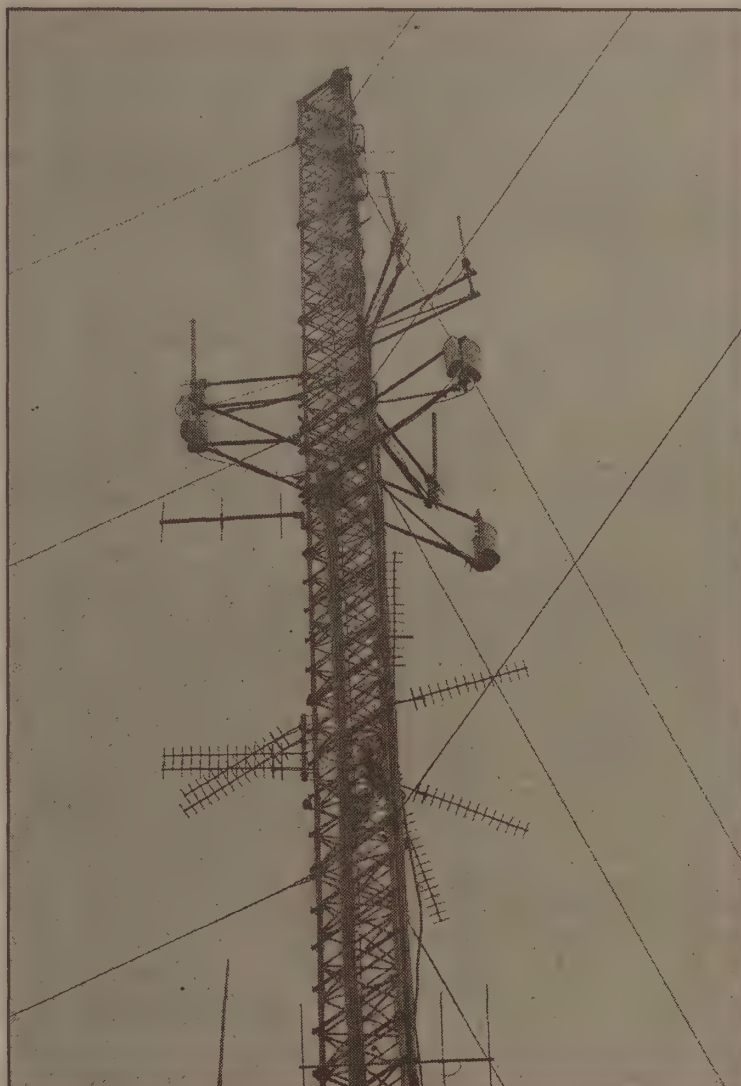

Cablevision has begun to struggle to close a cash flow gap which may top a billion dollars for this year. They have laid off hundreds of employees. They have delayed the start of some of the new services they have promised. About half of the Wiz electronics stores they own have been shuttered, they have put the Clearview Cinema chain subsidiary up for sale, they have arranged to buy cheaper set-top boxes from a different supplier and they have sold some of their networks to rivals. This week, they announced that on November 30, they will be closing a child care center they run in Woodbury, near their main offices. And they also announced that monthly fees would be raised on HBO and other premium services. They have even sent me a letter. I am, from their perspective, a gadfly. I hate the fact that for the past twenty years, they have been a monopoly. I am delighted, even if they are not delighted, that they now have competition. And I have said so.

A public relations officer, in Cablevision's letter to me (which we published), had these things to say.

"Mr. Rattiner appears to believe that Cablevision is scaling back its service offerings. The opposite is true. Cablevision is accelerating the deployment of new services, including iO, the company's digital television service, which will be available to 3.8 million homes by the end of the year.

"Mr. Rattiner's complaints coincide with the stunning growth of cable television advertising, which makes Cablevision a direct competitor to Dan's Papers."

Well, my original objection to the twenty years of monopoly by Cablevision still stands. In a country where we pride ourselves on freedom of speech and the free dissemination of news — anybody can start a newspaper, for instance — access to television programming all across Long Island for all that time has been controlled by one man, Charles Dolan. One can argue that he was benevolent as a dictator of what appeared on our TVs. But the fact is he dictated to us, got rich doing it, and now is suffering

The Cablevision Tower in springs

"This proposed merger flies in the face of everything we are trying to do... We are trying to create competition, not monopolies."

mightily because of, well, competition, a word he never had to utter before about two years ago.

But now it's out there, and Cablevision is screwing up their response to it. One can feel sad for them. But then, you can get service and other stuff from the satellite people cheaper than you can get it from Cablevision.

There is hope for Cablevision, however, and it involves one of the two dish companies, EchoStar. For the past year, EchoStar has struggled with its own financial problems. It has gone into talks with Hughes, the company that owns DirecTV, in the hopes of arranging a merger. Hughes was eager enough, but the SEC is blocking it. If the merger went through, there would only be one, very huge satellite dish company for you to choose from. Nationally, if you lived in an area where there was cable, you'd have a choice between cable and one dish company. If you lived where there was no cable, your only choice would be the merged dish company. In other words, no choice at all. A monopoly, just like the one that Cablevision enjoyed here on Long Island all these years.

"This proposed merger flies in the face of everything we are trying to do nationwide," one of the commissioners said. "We are trying to create competition, not monopolies."

But EchoStar and Hughes are persisting with the application. Their agreement provides that they persist, at least until January. If the SEC, after listening to an appeal they just filed, finally does turn them down and Hughes does not entertain any alternative to EchoStar until the end of January, then EchoStar will have to pay Hughes $800 million, which was the price EchoStar negotiated to keep Hughes (and DirecTV's) attention. This situation is fluid.

Back in August, Cablevision, with no experience and no money, audaciously announced that it wanted to set up its own satellite business. It approached EchoStar with the idea of paying them a lot of money to get EchoStar out of financial trouble. Cablevision would buy 17 satellite frequencies from them. Since Cablevision is only a local cable company (here on Long Island), and had money troubles of its own, this seemed an absurd idea to EchoStar and despite the fact that they needed money, they turned Cablevision down. But the offer was made.

Another player in this is Rupert Murdoch, whose News Corporation owns hundreds of newspapers, several dish TV firms in other countries, and who would like nothing better than to create a nationwide American satellite dish company. Murdoch competed with EchoStar a year ago to make a deal with DirecTV, but he lost.

On the other hand, he also turned away an offer by Cablevision, in that instance to team up with him and go into the satellite dish business. Who needs to partner with a regional cable company who's never been in the business? Now it appears that Rupert Murdoch might move in and try to take over DirecTV once again, at least after January when the EchoStar option expires. There seems little doubt that the FCC would look favorably on Murdoch moving into the national satellite business if Murdoch were to partner with an experienced player. For example, Murdoch might partner with AT&T, which is in the process of successfully teaming up with ComCast, another satellite outfit. This looks like a great fit.

How does all this benefit Cablevision? Well, it's known as a "wing and a prayer." What Cablevision really needs is a bank. But the banks are disgusted with Cablevision. With the company's grand plans and negative cash flow, the banks are not eager to lend Cablevision money. On the other hand, the situation with the big boys — DirecTV, EchoStar, AT&T and News Corp — is very fluid. Something could change, and suddenly it could become an opportunity for Cablevision.

Of course, you don't really care about all of this. All you want to know is that you turn on your TV and you have either satellite service or cable service or whatever else is new. Not to worry. There are plenty of players out there. The competition is here and has been here for at least two years. The only real danger is that the Dolans might be out of work.

Now that would be an interesting experience for them.

Things move fast in the world of finance. Since the above was written, Cablevision reported third quarter earnings, which showed a widening loss from all operations. They also fired 1,300 employees from their money losing Wiz electronics store subsidiary. On the other hand, Cablevision negotiated the sale of its Bravo cable channel, one of its crown jewels, to NBC for $1.25 billion, some of which is stock that can immediately converted to about $465 million in much needed cash. Wall Street responded with a rally for Cablevision stock, but analysts cautioned that the future would depend on whether Cablevision used the money to shore up its debt (good) or to fund new ventures such as the satellite business (bad.) Cablevision was selling for $14.79 at the end of the Tuesday session.

Shipwrecks

A Lecture At Southampton College Chronicles The Demise Of Ships Off Our Shores

By Brian Zapin

Shipping has been an integral part of Long Island's economy and image since colonial times and particularly in the 1800's, when whaling was the second largest industry in New York State and the seventh largest industry in the country. Just looking around the East End, one can note the numerous geographical points of interest so named after famous explorers, explorations, ships and shipwrecks.

"Long Island in itself is a ship graveyard," Southampton College Professor Phil Keith told a small group of students at a lecture at Southampton College last week. "There are hundreds of ships [that have gone down] dating back to the earliest colonial days up to the end of World War II."

Keith is actually a professor of business at the college, but every semester he organizes and hosts a series of special Saturday evening lectures called "Mysteries of Long Island" and "A Short History of a Very Long Island." He has also written a number of books about the East End and Long Island, including Hamptons Survival Guide, which has been updated annually for each of the past eight years. This past Saturday he hosted "A Profound History of Shipwrecks," chronicling the famous shipwrecks that have occurred off the coast of Long Island.

According to Keith, notable Long Island shipwrecks start with Adrian Block, the namesake for Block Island. In 1614, Block was a Dutch explorer who had already sailed to the New World several times, returning this time to exploit the fur trade with the Algonquin Indian tribe who lived in northern New York along the Hudson River. After trading seashells for the furs, Block loaded the ship and set sail for Holland, planning a short lay-over in New Amsterdam.

On the way to New Amsterdam, however, around what is now lower Manhattan, the ship went down with all of its cargo. Block and his crew did not want to spend the winter on the desolate island. Back then, explained Keith, Manhattan for a famous shipwreck. In 1781, during the Revolutionary War, a British Man-O-War, the Culloden, assigned to New York for the British embargo, smashed into Montauk Point and sank. All 650 crewmen survived the ordeal. But the British did not want the ship to fall into the hands of the revolutionaries and subsequently destroyed it. Montauk Point shares its moniker with Culloden Point and is Long Island's only underwater park.

Long Island was also home to the first submarine tested, Keith noted. Most date the first submarine to the Civil War, but it was actually developed during the War of 1812.

"It was a submersible," said Keith. "It wasn't actually a submarine, just a ship that could travel underwater."

The Turtle, as the ship was called, ran with a small portion of the ship visible above the water, hence the name. Designed by Robert Fulton, the inventor of the steamboat, it had torpedoes, which were more like long spears, made of wood with dynamite on the end to impale enemy ships. The ship was supposed to be used by the Americans to combat the enormously powerful British Navy at the time, but The Turtle never actually made it into combat.

When the Americans launched the ship in 1814 "it caught a gale off Southold that drove in on the beach" where they could not move it afterwards. The Americans then tried to destroy the ship to prevent it from falling into the hands of the British. But they were unsuccessful; the ship's wood was completely saturated and wouldn't was nothing but a couple of little mud huts that were not suitable for winter weather. So the group salvaged what they could off the ship, went out to western Long Island to cut the trees for wood, and built a new ship in a matter of months that eventually got them back across the Atlantic. The entire crew survived and Block returned several more times to ultimately make his fortune.

Block's voyage was the first of many notable Long Island shipwrecks. It was also the most famous of all Block's journeys to the New World and one of the reasons for giving Block Island its name. But Block Island is not the only spot named Tracey Tooker was born and raised in Locust Valley, Long Island, the oldest of the four children of a building contractor. She was interested in the arts as a young girl, always painting, drawing, taking dance lessons. She rode horses, or tried to.

By Dan Rattiner

"We had horses but I was afraid to ride because I didn't like hitting them or kicking them," she says. She went to Greenville, a private school.

At the age of 13, her parents divorced, and, along with her younger siblings, she went off to live in Aspen with her mother. By the time she was 19, she had several courses at Colorado Mountain College in Glenwood Springs, Colorado, under her belt and she felt it was time to find a new challenge.

"After skiing every hill and bicycling every mountain I wanted to find a new direction," she said.

She applied to Pratt and went to live, at first, with her father, who had moved to Centre Island. It was the perfect thing for her. On a full scholarship, she graduated in three years with high honors, and a degree in Industrial Design and a Certificate of Merit from the Industrial Designer's Society of America. The year was 1975.

She got a job working for J. C. Penny in their industrial design division. Here in Manhattan, she worked on designing vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, smoke detectors and lights. She designed a calculator that looked like a seashell.

"Often in Manhattan," she told me, "things happen because of an apartment, or in my case, because of a loft. In 1975, after leaving Pratt, I had bought a loft in Soho. It was, and is, at 18 Mercer Street. After a couple of years at J. C. Penny, the company decided to close down the Manhattan office. We were in a recession, and nobody was retooling. With my skills, I could go to Michigan and design cars. Or I could go to Rochester for cameras. Or I could stay in New York at my loft and, who knew what? I decided on the loft. I also wanted to check out designing fashion sportswear."

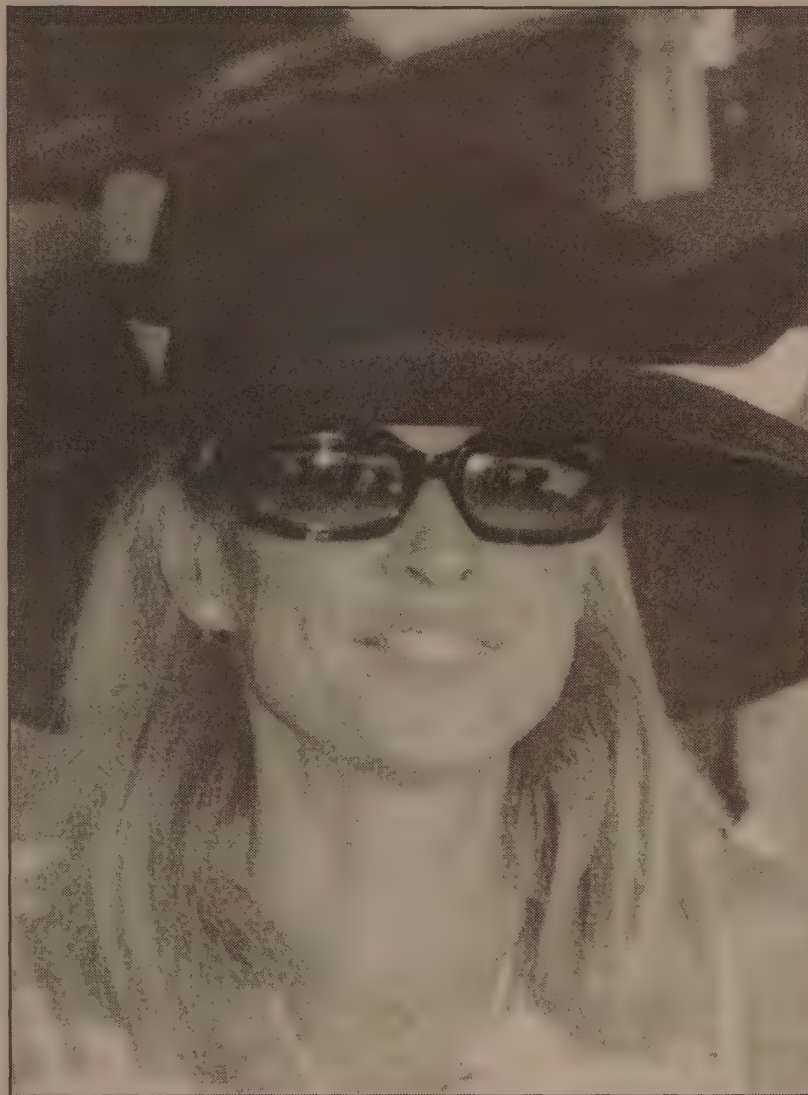

To keep food on the table, she worked, for awhile, at Shaw Walker in Millburn, New Jersey, designing furniture and office systems. She also took courses at the Fashion Institute of Technology and, for the first time, began designing hats. She loved designing hats. She would work on them at home.

"Until then," she said, "I wasn't someone who even wore hats."

In 1982, she graduated FIT with honors, receiving an Associate Degree in Fashion Design and a Millinery Certificate. A teacher told her "you have gold in your fingers." And then she got a job at Liz Claiborne, running the hat division.

How it happened was this. A member of the Alvin Ailey Dance Troupe, a Parisian, saw one of her hats in a store and contacted her. He said he wanted to contract her to make hats for a modern dance he had choreographed. She was glad to oblige, making all sorts of hats in her Mercer Street loft, each one different, for each of the dancers. After one of the performances, people from Liz Claiborne who had seen the show said they wanted to hire her. They would contract her for a year. She could run the hat division. She went.

"But I wasn't all that happy there," she said. "I didn't like Seventh Avenue much. And then one day, one of my co-employees, Dianne De Libigasier, a jewelry joined with De Libigasier doing trunk shows up and down the east coast, going to Junior League meetings, to the du Pont Christmas Show, the Princeton Christmas Show, several horse shows. Everywhere she went, people wanted her hats, which she was selling for upwards of $100, even to $5,000, each.

"Every hat was a one of a kind," she said. "They still are. I make them from Milan straw or Swiss straw, which comes like yarn. It has to be sewn. I've done them of horse hair, of Pagalina straw. I sew them on a block, then block them on a block, shellac them, bake them in a kiln for an hour, put in the wire. My shapes are my shapes. I do them sporty, or elegant or cute. Each hat has its own character. All are classics."

In 1988, Tracey Tooker decided to open a hat store. She found a store front for rent in Soho, not far from her loft. The rent was $1000 a month.

"This was the old Tales of Hoffman store," she said. "It turned out to be a disaster. We set up the storefront. And we were so excited we apparently didn't even notice there was no heat. I ran into someone who had come to our opening and she said it was the coldest store she had ever been in. I contacted the landlady. She did nothing. The electric went out. We left after a month."

Undaunted, Tooker tried again. She found a space, reasonably priced, at 82nd Street and Lexington Avenue that would be available month to month. That suited her just fine. She opened there in the spring of 1988 and, from the start, was a big hit. She would become, as destiny seemed to be insisting, the milliner to Society.

At the same time Tooker opened a store in Southampton.

"I had come out to do the horse show in 1987. I had friends out here. And for that weekend, I was able to arrange to rent a vacant store near the corner of Windmill Lane and Jobs Lane for the weekend for $1000. I was really busy. So I decided to do a store, which I did the following year."

In 1992, Tooker also opened a store in Palm Beach.

"I had a girl who worked for me who just wanted to go there. I have an apartment there. I found an abandoned retail space on Worth Avenue, down a little alley behind the Bice Restaurant. Few people walked down that way. I thought it would be a perfect space and it was."

Tracey Tooker still makes all her hats in her loft on Mercer Street, although she has also, for a long time, contracted with a Mrs. Albrizio, who together with her family and staff, make hats (by hand) but to Tracey Tooker's specifications, in a studio elsewhere in Soho. In recent years, Mrs. Albrizio's nephew has taken over that business.

All together, Tracey Tooker believes she has designed and made more than 46,000 hats over the years, selling them from her three stores or from her loft.

"Lately I have begun to feel that the hats have begun to take over the loft," Tooker said.

Needless to say, many celebrities have purchased Tracey Tooker hats. They include Shirley McLaine, Raquel Welch, Brooke Astor, Bianca Jagger, Martha Stewart, Cissy Tyson and the late Bella Abzug. Once,

"It was Nancy Reagan's secret service people," she said. "Then she arrived. She was so polite. And she bought two hats."

designer, asked if I would come over to her apartment on Sutton Place and bring hats. She was going to do a trunk show. I brought hats. And almost as quickly as I could make them I sold them. It was hat hell. Hat madness. The show lasted three days."

With this success, and with the year up, Tooker burn. While trying to destroy it, however, two British warships showed up and a fight ensued. The American militiamen scattered and the British "took hold of the ship only to destroy it because they did not know what it was."

There is the famous landing of the Amistad in 1839 and The Lexington in 1840, which proved to be one of the worst maritime disasters to occur off of Long Island. All but four of an estimated 130 crewmen and passengers died in the wreck. No one knows for certain how many people there were in the disaster, however, because it happened before passenger manifestos were made mandatory.

Shipping was so important to Long Island, and shipwrecks so sadly prevalent, that in the mid-1830's the government began sponsoring the United States Life Saving Service, both nationally and on Long Island.

"There was a lot of traffic in the Long Island Sound back then," explained Keith. "The United States Life Saving Service was sponsored partially by the US Government and partially by the many different companies interested in saving people and cargo."

The Service lasted until 1915, though only to 1911 on Long Island, when the Life Saving Service merged with the Revenue Cutter Service to become the United States Coast Guard. In those eighty some-odd years, however, more than a hundred thousand lives were saved.

The most tragic shipwreck in Long Island history is that of The General Slocum in 1904, when fires blazed through the paddlewheel steamboat, killing more than a thousand passengers and crewmen. Over a hundred rescue vessels were launched, unsuccessfully, to help the people on board, where a crewman accidentally threw coal on the fire while attempting to put it out, and where the lifeboats were rendered useless, stuck to the side of the boat by thick paint. The Captain was eventually convicted of not holding fire drills on the ship and sentenced to ten years in prison. He only served three.

And then there are the Germans incursions during the two World Wars, the only enemy government to come close to American soil since the War of 1812. Long Island was the site of numerous U-Boat victims, like the USS San Diego in 1918, the only major American warship lost in World War I, and possibly the USS Turner in 1944. The explosion in the USS Turner, though still unofficially determined, is generally accepted as coming from a mine set by a U-Boat that floated into the idle ship, precisely where the ship's magazines were situated.

"Mysteries of Long Island" is a profoundly fun and interesting look at an important aspect of Long Island that sometimes tends to be forgotten. Looking at the impact of shipping and shipwrecks of the area lends a reminder of what Long Island was and, to a large degree, still is.

Today, duck farming, a venerable agricultural occupation, is still allowed, but there are strict laws in place to keep the neighbors free of duck pollution. One gets a permit to have only a certain number of ducks. And to get the permit you have to build a septic system large enough for that number. Well, it turns out — and this is hard to believe — that some officials of the DEC (Department of Environmental Conservation) on their day off were kayaking in Mill Pond in Moriches, which is a tributary of Moriches Bay, and found themselves having paddled, much to their surprise, right into the middle of a whole lot of duck shit. They were surprised and, I suppose, appalled, to find this since you are not supposed to be able to find this, and further paddling brought them to the source of this duck shit which was an outfall pipe that came from the Jurgielewicz Duck Farm not far away.

A further investigation ensued. The Jurgielewicz Duck Farm has a permit to raise 35,000 ducks at a time. They were raising more than 100,000 ducks at a time. Summonses were issued, two of them, to Ben Jurgieliewicz, for discharging sewage illegally into the waters of New York in violation of his permit. Ben Jurgieliewicz, if convicted, could be fined $50,000 for every day he continues in violation and could get up to three years in prison.

Bad week for ducks. I wouldn't be surprised if later this week, some trucker in a big fourteen-wheeler loses control and drives off the Flanders Road and flattens The Big Duck. Heads will hang low at the New York State Register of Historic Places in Albany. Mustn't even think that. •

JANE GLEASON RECEIVES AWARDS

By Dan Rattiner

In 1970, Dan's Papers hired a new employee named Jane Gleason. She was 68 years old at the time, not that that matters, but it was retirement job for her, and she would work part time. For a number of years, she worked in our typesetting department, and after awhile, when we got our first computerized system, made by Compugraphic, Jane mastered it and became head of the department.

In 1987, at the age of 85, Jane retired from Dan's Papers, not because she had become old and infirm, but because the Compugraphic system was being phased out and a new and completely different system, made by IBM, was being brought in. Jane just felt that she'd worked enough and rather than have to learn a new system all over again, it might be best for her to retire. At 85, we agreed with her. We held a dinner for her. She'd been with us 17 years. I had a silver bowl made for the occasion, and it was inscribed with her name and thanked her for the seventeen years of service.

Two weeks ago, Jane Gleason shined up her bowl at her Cooper Street home in Southampton and then forgot to take it with her. The Mayor of Southampton, Joe Romanowski, was coming, and he had with a proclamation that said November 2, 2002 is Jane Gleason Day in Southampton in honor of her celebrating her 99th birthday.

Mayor Romanowski and Jane Gleason

"I forgot about the bowl in all the excitement," she told me.

Mayor Romanowski also had with him two other official documents. One was a letter from Southampton Town Supervisor Patrick Heaney applauding her for all she achieved, and noting that she had lived in Southampton for more than 40 years and after her retirement she had worked for us for 17 years and had also, for 15 of those years, volunteered at Southampton Hospital. "You serve as a great inspiration to your family and friends," the letter read.

The second letter, from Governor Pataki of the State of New York, offered his "sincere congratulations."

Dan's Papers was not informed of these proceedings, and so we didn't learn about them until they had concluded. But we offer our own congratulations to Jane Gleason who has retained her sense of humor and her love of life and salute her by dedicating this issue of Dan's Papers to her.

she was in her store in Manhattan and noticed some very strange men nosing around. Black suits and ties. Ear pieces.

"It was Nancy Reagan's secret service people," she said. "Then she arrived. She was so polite. And she bought two hats. She's become a regular customer."

Of course, Tooker can't keep track of everybody who buys her hats.

"Last year, I was watching the Kentucky Derby on television. Monarchos won, and the camera panned on the horse's owners, the Oxley family who were jumping up and down in the stands. And there was Mrs. Oxley wearing, well I couldn't be sure at first, what looked like one of my hats. A few days later I called her up. Yes it was my hat. And surely it was a lucky hat. She wanted to know if she could arrange to wear one of my hats at the next Kentucky Derby or at any one of the races where horses from their stables would be running and I said sure. Wherever they are, when a big race approaches, there is Mrs. Oxley and her husband in my store, buying a hat."

If Tracey Tooker has "fingers of gold" for hat making, it turns out she has talent in other creative areas as well. Here in the Hamptons, in her free time, she'll hop in her car and find a spot to paint or draw. She's been known to put a beach chair on top of her car and go up there to draw.

And then there's the Louvre. One year, not long after she graduated from Pratt, she co-designed a chair. Called "Penelope's Chair," it received an honorable mention from the American Society of Interior Designers. Shortly thereafter, it was bought by the Louvre, for its permanent collection. •

An American Beauty In Southold: Grateful Deli

By Susan Whitney Simm

"And it's just a box of rain, or a ribbon for your hair, Such a long, long time to be gone and a short time to be there." From "Box of Rain," American Beauty, the Grateful Dead, 1970.

Whether you are a fan of the famous band or not, if delicious food and courteous service rank high on your list, head over to Southold's newest culinary destination, the Grateful Deli. Though not around to enjoy a "U.S. Blues" sandwich of roast beef, ham, turkey, lettuce, tomato, Cole slaw, and choice of dressing, Jerry Garcia – a man of many appetites – would certainly have approved.

"People are saying that we're the talk of the town and we're just thrilled," said Pat Spates, one of three partners including Rick Nappi and Rich Reinhardt, who also happens to be Pat's brother-in-law. "We opened three weeks ago and we couldn't be happier with the response."

The building that houses Grateful Deli today has gone through a few incarnations since the long and successful run of The Quiet Man tavern (yours truly played many a dart game in the back room in the old days) when the interior was very dark and smoky. Good for a tavern, bad for a restaurant.

"We're always looking for new opportunities and when this building came up for sale Rich, a builder who did the remodeling work, said 'Let's do it. It's getting busier out here in Southold and I think we can make a go of it.'"

Pat and other partner Rick Nappi grew up in Smithtown together and have been friends since high school. The two opened their first deli in 1983 and today still own three other businesses – in Wantagh, Melville and Massapequa – besides Grateful.

Rich Reinhardt, Rick Nappi, and Pat Spates of Grateful Deli

"We compete against each other in a friendly way all the time," said Pat. "We have fun at work. We have the same goal, to take care of the customers. You have to treat people the same whether they're spending 50 cents or $500 and that's what people don't do these days. It's a big mistake."

Shining deli cases, holding both hot and cold items, line the length of Grateful's retail area. Hot daily specials ($6.99) have included dishes such as Chicken Francaise, BBQ Ribs, Stuffed Shells, Sausage and Peppers, Oriental specialties, and Oven-Roasted Chicken. Rice or mashed potatoes as well as mixed vegetables are included. In fact, many people are catching on to the fact that they can pick up whole meals at lunchtime and reheat them for dinner.

"A woman called me the other day and both she and her husband are handicapped," said Pat. "She asked if we could deliver two meals three to five days a week. So we're setting up an account for them. I think others will follow."

Which brings me to the question of catering. The building has a full kitchen and everything is home-made using recipes that have been developed over the years at the partners' other businesses.

"We currently do events for from 50-500 people at our other stores and we plan to do that here as well," said Pat. "We specialize in grilled lobster tails, filet mignon, chicken, burgers and hotdogs with all the trimmings. We just did a wedding rehearsal dinner in Jamesport a week ago. If somebody comes to us, we take care of everything, all the details."

But what about the name, Grateful Deli?

"It was Rich's idea. He even wanted tie-dyed coffee cups. We named a few sandwiches in honor of the band – such as the "Sugar Magnolia" (a sandwich made with honey turkey). But to me, what it really means is this: people come through the door and I say to myself, 'I'm grateful for our customers.' Hopefully that fact will be apparent as we develop this business."

Grateful Deli is currently open from 6 a.m. – 8 p.m. Monday-Saturday. Sunday hours will probably be 7 a.m. – 5 p.m. Specials daily, gourmet sandwiches, breakfast, wraps, burgers, soups, desserts and beverages. Catering for events large and small. Call 765-6408.

You Say Nouveau, I Say Novello

Ann Marie and Marco Borghese

Beaujolais Nouveau is a French phenomenon. It is made only from hand-harvested Gamay grapes grown in the Beaujolais region of France and is always released on the third Thursday of November. It is meant to be enjoyed young and slightly chilled, which emphasizes its inherent fruitiness.

This year, for the first time in Long Island's brief wine history, a wine has been made in the style of the much-anticipated annual Beaujolais Nouveau release. Castello di Borghese's Novello – which means "new" in Italian as nouveau means "new" in French – is light, fruity and fun, just like the object of its inspiration. But unlike its European cousin, it is made from 100 percent Pinot Noir.

"On a beautiful sunny day following several days of rain, Mark Terry, our winemaker, decided to pick our crop of Pinot Noir," said Marco Borghese. "A special yeast was chosen to highlight the fruit and enhance different characteristics during fermentation. The wine extracted a hint of tannins from the skins giving a crisp cranberry, chocolate-covered cherry flavor along with a vibrant violet color."

The wine is light, delicious and – priced at $8.95 at the winery – easy to swallow.

With Susan Simm

Full Disclosure: "Analysts" Take Stock of a Grand Vintage

As Long Island wines haven't been around long enough by the world's greatest wine region's standards to merit many vertical tastings – sampling wines of different vintages in ascending order from the same estate – we have yet to really determine the longevity of many of our local vintages.

Most of the world's wines are meant to be downed, not cellared – a perfect example of which is the soon-to-be-released Beaujolais Nouveau – but many of the greatest reds of Europe, California and, increasingly, other parts of the globe, benefit from some time in the bottle. In fact, it is a benchmark achievement in our industry here to discover that some of our wines are worthy of cellaring.

A key aspect of wine that will age well is a good balance of fruit, acid, alcohol and tannins. No one element should obliterate another. Unlike people, a wine that lacks balance and charm when young has little hope of acquiring it with age. Unbalanced wines, on the other hand, tend only to get more so.

So it was with great anticipation that I planned a wine tasting dinner with my friend John Ross for the purpose of comparing both the 1995 and 2000 Grand Vintage Cabernet Sauvignon and Chardonnay from Paumanok Vineyards. The results represent exciting news for the industry.

"1995 was a groundbreaking vintage on the East End, especially for Cabernet Sauvignon, and Paumanok's 1995 Grand Vintage Cabernet Sauvignon was a stunning example of that grape and that vintage," said John, recalling its release. "It was a big wine with lots of structure, lots of fruit, lots of tannins. Just delicious."

Luckily, when John sold his restaurant, Ross' North Fork, back in 2000, he "made a point of saving '95s, and it's paying off now because they are scarce." Paumanok itself doesn't even have any of its '95s left, so the chance to taste these wines presented an unparalleled opportunity.

Chardonnay, of course, doesn't age like Cabernet and it's generally thought that seven years is about the end of the line for most of them. The 1995 Grand Vintage Chardonnay was still surprisingly vibrant with, young characteristics such as good acidity and good fruit, qualities mentioned above that help a wine age gracefully. But John was really seduced by the "beautiful, butterscotch-honey flavor and texture" that the wine just exuded. And the 2000 Grand Vintage Chardonnay next to it? Very lively with young fruit, buttery flavors and, most promising of all, very good balance.

Next we moved onto the Cabs. About the 1995 John enthused, "Over the years it has aged very well. It softened and developed more complexity." Drinking the 2000 Grand Vintage side by side was "a great pleasure because they are both of the same breed and have an awful lot in common." The 2000, John feels, is a more elegant wine – I agree – and will probably develop more subtle flavors than the 1995.

"It's the true test of great wines, putting them away for a few years and waiting to see if they get better," said John. "Some Long Island wines are surviving this test of time, and Paumanok's 1995 Grand Vintage Chardonnay and Cabernet are certainly among them."

"We coined the expression 'Grand Vintage' in 1993 and agreed, at that time, that we would only use it if and when we could match the quality of that vintage," said Paumanok's owner, Charles Massoud. "We have used it since in 1995 and 2000 and, I am happy to report, that we will most likely use it again for some of the 2001 vintages. At Paumanok, Grand Vintage signals the best that the estate can produce."

A best, clearly, that is yet to come. Cheers.

Off To New York... By David Lion Rattiner

Tricky New York Business

The other day I was walking by a building in Manhattan when I decided to walk inside. I went over and looked at the building directory. On the tenth floor and it listed Broadway Dance Company.

Hmmm, I thought. Not a bad place for a young guy to go and check out. A bit surprised with my decision, I walked into the elevator and hit ten.

In the elevator was another directory to the building. Floor seven had a small sushi restaurant on it where you could look out the window. Floor eight had a company called Raycon. Floor nine had a company on it called Wireless World. Floor ten, where I was currently headed; had the Broadway Dance Company and floor eleven had the name of a chiropractor named Bob Goldstein.

I looked at all of these floors and was amazed that all of these companies could co-exist and actually make money even though there are no signs in front of the building. For all I knew, these buildings were just apartments. But the fact that there were all of these businesses that had nothing to do with each other and were all just kind of thrown into this giant apartment building blew my mind. Anything could be in these buildings. I got to the tenth floor.

When I walked out of the elevator, I saw a room where there were about twenty people, all in great shape, dancing their butts off. They were going through a huge routine to a jazz song that I did not recognize. Everyone was swing dancing in unison and doing flips, kicks, and spins. It was really neat. I walked right up to the desk where I met an attendant.

"Can I help you?"

"Hi, I just wanted to see what this was all about, I hope that you don't mind." I realized how ridiculous this must have sounded.

"Oh, well you can check it out. Here, we have a magazine; it is just a dollar."

"Thanks," I said.

Feeling happy that I did not just get thrown out of the place, I had a seat outside the studio and flipped through the magazine as I watched the dancers. Suddenly one of the dancers grabbed her back. I thought that she was one of the better dancers but she was obviously in pain.

"What happened?" I asked.

"Oh, my back just goes out of whack from time to time. I'm going to go to the chiropractor."

"My back bothers me a lot too sometimes. Do they help at all?"

"Oh, I couldn't live without this guy. It is such a relief to get your back cracked."

"Mind if I come with you?"

"No, please do."

I decided to give it a shot.

I walked up to Dr. Bob Goldstein's office. Within ten minutes, both the dancer and I were told to wait in separate rooms and the doctor would be right in. We went our separate ways.

Before I knew it, the Doc told me that I needed to get x-rays. He sent me down to the eighth floor, said he just called it in, and that I should come right back. Within fifteen minutes, I slammed down my insurance card and got some x-rays from Raycon. The co-pay was ten dollars, the x-rays probably a hundred.

I got back up to the doc and waited about thirty minutes until he came over to me.

"Well, I got your x-rays and it looks like you're going to need some treatment."

I decided I should call my Dad. I needed to let him know that I was going to use my insurance card. I looked at my cell phone and it was out of batteries.

"Know where I can charge my cell?" The doc looked at me and replied, "Ninth."

I went down to Wireless World and bought myself a new cell phone charger for fifteen bucks and plugged it into the wall. I told my Dad the situation and he agreed to the treatment.

Once I hung up the phone, Dr. Bob put me in several different pretzel positions. It felt good but pointless and I was pretty sure he didn't solve anything. The final result was the same feeling I get when I have my brother crack my back. Just a little relief, but not a lot.

I left the office and paid fifty bucks for the "treatment." It took him maybe thirty seconds to crack my back. I thought about becoming a chiropractor, seemed pretty easy to me.

He tried to convince me to come back, but I just walked out a little angry. In fact I was so angry that I decided that I should maybe get myself some lunch. Sushi sounded about right. I walked into the elevator and hit the seven button.

I guess having businesses in buildings isn't such a bad idea after all. Ain't New York great?

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

CUSTOM CARS

I just came back from a car show that featured cars of all types, from custom hot rods to classic cars from the '40s to the '60s. There were sports cars, sedans, coupes, even a smattering of vintage wooden boats. If it ran on gas and made noise, it was there.

I'm not a fan of vintage cars that have been hot rodded or highly customized, because I consider myself a purest where collector cars are concerned. I do have to admit the following: in the '40s and '50s owners did the same thing to their "new" cars, and the paint and craftsmanship on some of these rods was the best I've ever seen. They were certainly the most creative cars at the show.

The two customized cars that amazed me the most were a 1949 Rolls Royce Silver Wraith Limo and a 1939 supercharged Cord Beverly sedan. I'm sure Charles Rolls and Henry Royce would turn over in their graves if they ever saw the Rolls at the show. It was as magnificent as a big Rolls could be, except it was painted maroon and pink, with pink upholstery. Oh yes, it also had a 454 chrome plated Chevy V-8 in its exposed nose. To calm Charles and Henry, please note that the paint and interior were up to Rolls Royce standards.

While a tired Rolls Royce limo can be bought cheap, a Cord sedan cannot. That was my biggest surprise of the day. The Cord custom was beautiful, but a stock Cord 810 is even more beautiful. In fact many consider it to be one of the most important automotive designs of the twentieth century. What really caught my eye was that sitting in the engine compartment of the Cord was another Chevrolet motor. The original Cord was a front wheel drive car, one of the first, and this custom was obviously converted to rear wheel drive. Quite an engineering feat.

I was stunned by the conversion, and wondered why the owner just didn't use a '70s Oldsmobile Toronado drivetrain, which was front wheel drive. I also wondered why anyone, unless he was a little wacky, or a hyper-, dyed-in-the-wool "custom" car nut, would destroy a lovely and highly desirable stock $25,000 Cord Beverly Sedan.

It seems that, through the years, there have always been custom cars of all types. In the '50s a common practice was to nose and deck a car. That is to remove the hood and trunk ornaments on your car. This was common practice especially with Ford and Mercury coupes.

For historical reference, in the film Rebel Without A Cause James Dean's Mercury two-door coupe is nosed and decked. Another custom '50s Mercury coupe, identical to Dean's was the one Sly Stallone drove in the movie Cobra. However, Sly's car was more radical a custom, because not only was it nosed and decked, but chopped and channeled. This means the roof was lowered as well as several inches cut from the mid-section of the body.

I don't know what it is about '50s Mercury coupes, but Dean's was damaged and Sly's was destroyed. Maybe that is why there aren't many survivors left, especially in stock form. A '50s Mercury coupe and convertible are the most valuable Mercurys on the collector car scene.

Customizing is usually frowned upon by the sports car set. But in reality, isn't a Ford 427 Cobra or a Ford Shelby GT-350 really a customized car? What about the different variations of early British cars one could purchase. A Lotus Super Seven could be had with several different engines or fender designs. Many Rolls Royces and Bentley had bodies made to order. Factory custom cars. I remember that you could order a 1967 Ferrari GTB with an outside gas filler, fender flairs or special lights.

Quietly, if you knew the right people, the Porsche factory would do you little favors concerning your new or old Porsche. (It also helped if you had a lot of dough and spoke German.) To this day, the factory will paint your new car any special color you desire, for a price.

Ferrari, with its new $600,000 "Enzo" super car, custom builds for you a driver's seat to fit your pampered bottom. For that price, they should also include a twenty-first century version of Sophia Loren to keep you company in the passenger seat.

When I'm on the road and I see a lot of hot rod Hondas and Toyotas buzzing around annoyingly, I do smile to myself and think that these little buggers are the '49 Ford and '51 Mercury coupes of the future. The Miatas are the MGs.

The more things change, the more they seem to stay the same.

CHARLES ADDAMS: GUILD HALL

Charles Addams' cartoons are priceless, representing authentic icons of American culture. These icons, like Mr. Addams' work itself, are contradictory: a high and low brow concoction as manifested on the pages of The New Yorker and TV's The Addams Family, respectively. What makes the latter a particularly good example of popular taste is the way the TV series fulfilled certain human needs: to be amused and also to experience the grotesque. Most significantly to this critic, however, is the way the long-running TV program made the abnormal family fit normal, acceptable patterns of behavior. The Addams family was really like all the rest of us, thus demonstrating how the media fulfills another gratification: to share similar experiences with others.

Another contradiction is at work. Mr. Addams' illustrations have been described as both "ghoulish and macabre" and "adorable and sweet." A perfect combination, and one that also might fit the movies of Tim Burton (Battlejuice, Edward Scissorhands).

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

In fact, Mr. Addams' illustrations run amok with opposition and irony. Consider his drawings, which take place in the Middle Ages yet use contemporary language and themes. These examples include his "We're not living happily ever after," statement by a man (sporting a huge axe) sitting with his wife.

Other cartoons make the case as well: "I'm going to change him into a toad if he says, 'Hey, good looking' again," notes two witches; and the warning "keep your back to the wall at all times," spoken by a classic Addams' mother to her babysitter. This latter quip is especially relevant for parents no matter what the time period, again proving the point that media gives people a common frame of reference.

Naturally, Mr. Addams' work is not limited to scenes from the Middle Ages. One favorite takes place in what appears to be New England where a Mother Goose flies over the gothic rooftops. Here we see a character that is not your normal, kindly character, but one with flowing grey hair. In short, a Mother Goose who is odd and frightening, similar to the evil stepmothers of our childhood fairytales.

Which leads us to another conclusion. Mr. Addams seems to be concerned with debunking myths, removing the veil from traditional values and characters that we have long accepted as true.

Good for Mr. Addams. Why do myths exist but to debunk?

The show at East Hampton's Guild Hall will be on view until January 5.

HONORING THE ARTIST: STEVEN ROMM

While Steve Romm may be a multi-talented artist, teacher and all around good guy, clouds are what really turn him on. That's right - clouds.

"When I moved here in 1992, I had never painted landscapes," the jovial Mr. Romm explains, "I had always done sophisticated primitives. But I became fascinated with the relationship of clouds to each other and to the ground. I would often wait days for the right cloud to appear. It's like they are doing a ballet performance."

Mr. Romm has a distinct way of incorporating his clouds into paintings. "I'll photograph the clouds separately, deciding which ones go with a particular landscape. Often I will also select a landscape to go with the clouds.

This week's cover is a good example of Mr. Romm's process. It's a scene that is easily recognizable (Narrow Lane just before Sag Turnpike). The setting represents many aspects which Mr. Romm looks for: balance, color and the landscape's relationship to surrounding forms.

Although Mr. Romm seems well adjusted to the East End and his landscapes, he has had diverse experiences and professional pursuits, which have taken him to this point. For example, his art training included studying at the New School for Social Research at an early age. He was also the youngest student accepted for the summer program at Skowhegan Art School.

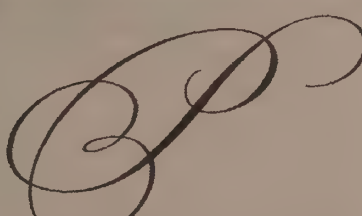

Next it was off to Boston University where Mr. Romm earned a degree in art and education. This led to his seventeen years as an art educator in Roslyn's public schools. Commenting on that time, Mr. Romm notes, "I never wrote a lesson plan; I was very untraditional. But you'd be surprised how many students I run into who say they have pursued a career in art."

Leaving teaching, Mr. Romm decided to become an artists' agent. ("I have a strange talent to make connections," he says.) One thing led to another, and he found himself involved in public relations, marketing fine art posters that his client had created.

In 1987, Mr. Romm started his own poster company, which is still thriving today. It's a special business because it features black and white fine art photography by such local, well-known photographers as Daniel Jones and Richard Clavo.

Subsequently, Mr. Romm has found time to obtain a Masters degree from C.W. Post in drawing and painting. He is kept busy these days doing commissions (an upcoming one includes a painting of his client's Santé Fe home). And, naturally, he's always looking for those perfect clouds...

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here. Honoring Long Island and the Hamptons as "Hollywood East" by presenting films produced here.

2 P.M. Saturday, November 16 – LAST SUMMER IN THE HAMPTONS

Three generations of a family of inflated egos and talent come to their East Hampton summer home for what will be the last time. For icon Viveca Lindfors, it was to be her last film.

2 P.M. Saturday, November 23 – MASQUERADE

A taunting, romantic suspense thriller of a young man's ambiguous ambitions and the wealthy wife he married for her dowry? It is a dark, who-dunnit plot lit up by beautiful people and, likewise beautiful Southampton and Sag Harbor.

Saturday, November 30 – No Showing

2 P.M. Saturday, December 7 – NETWORK

East Hampton's titanic denizens, Director Sidney Lumet and writer Paddy Chayefsky's dead-on "shot heard 'round the world" taken at television and unprincipled industry in general, presaged today's headlines. A way-over-the-top entertaining melodrama, it won Oscars' for Mr. Chayefsky, Peter Finch, Faye Dunaway and Beatrice Straight. This film gets you up off your seat shouting, "We aren't going to take it anymore!"

2 P.M. Saturday, December 14 – SABRINA

A bright holiday bauble. The lots of color added remake of the Audrey Hepburn/Bogart original, adds more gilt to the other L.I. Gold Coast, Glen Cove, where Scrooge, business only, Harrison Ford is made to appreciate the cheer in the world by his chauffeur's young daughter. It's a lush, very-merry movie.

Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival 2002

LAST SUMMER IN THE HAMPTONS

On Saturday, November 16 at 2 p.m., Dan's Papers and Southampton College present, Last Summer In The Hamptons. This film absolutely epitomizes the theme of Dan's Papers' "They Made The Movie Here" FREE Film Festival. Henry Jaglom's 1995 film is an Ode On A Yearn for Hamptons summers, extolling the warm, nostalgic, souvenir quality of the memorable experiences evoked by the East End, in its "hottest" season. Last Summer In The Hamptons was entirely shot here and, was made and performed by people who have a great deal invested in this East End community and I'm not necessarily talking about real estate. The film pictures stage and movie people embroiled in a theatrically bristling, friction-packed weekend at the family home of an aging but still dynamic actress, portrayed by the venerable Viveca Lindfors. The role is Ms. Lindfors. It replicated her own past and present and, above all, her singular personality.

Ms. Lindfors is Helena Mora (and vice-versa). She bought her East Hampton house years ago, when she starred in Hollywood movies opposite leads like Errol Flynn. Today, the house's shingles have darkened and the white trim paint is peeling and she is tiring. For years, she's made the small estate a theatre workshop for would-be actors and playwrights' study and work at the craft and, in the summer months she puts on plays outdoors on her property. This summer she deliberately rounds up all of her children, in-laws and grandchildren to announce to them and her extended family of apprentices, that this will be their last summer there. She is selling the property she had named "Proskurov." No one in her large family knows why. The property name's odd ambiguousness is typical of the matriarch's sway over her talented and dysfunctional family, all of whom have contracted the theatrical virus of passion.

On top of the family's bubbling pot of steamy personalities, is dangled a prime cut of added heat – a young prominent movie star. When she's dropped in as a weekend guest things really percolate. Family problems stew. Sex heats up every which way, heterosexually and otherwise, instigating suicide and murder (attempts) revealing too much vulnerability. But, most naked and over-baked is the uncovered process of Acting, Theatre and, Putting On A Show!

The very independent director, Henry Vaglom, has added personal Hamptons mementos to the script he has written with Victoria Foyt who also co-stars with Lindfors as the Hollywood star/house guest. The plot (which Mr. Vaglom has credited thanks to Anton Chekhov, James Joyce and Jean Renoir) centers somewhat around a play written by a grandson, played by Jon Robin Baitz. It is so good, everyone wants to act in it or direct it or just get in on it. A large cast keeps the "Theatre People" funny and moving. Sharing poses are Andre Gregory, Martha Plimpton, Savanna Boucher, Ron Rifkin, Nick Gregory, Diane Sallinger and many more. In cameos are Roscoe Lee Browne and the late Roddy McDowall. In there, too, is Lindfors' actual son, Kristoffer Tabori. This is Ms. Lindfors' last film. The once raven-haired movie beauty is seen in this film with flaring white hair but at the peak of her eloquent zeal and authority after years of important stage roles. If you have ever wondered about the worth of motion picture imagery, here is a strong message. Ms. Lindfors has passed on, but there she is on the screen, kind of chiseled into the mountainside for us to consider with admiration and respect.

Come to Southampton College's Chancellor's Hall and sit in the audience for Last Summer and Lindfors' final show. There are refreshments besides me, your host, Guy de Fraumeni with Sarah Halsey and maybe a surprise guest.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

Hogwash! It's all humbuggery. There just ain't no justice! I don't care what they say. If you take someone else's film, update the script, cast new and younger actors and add a billion decibels of 41 different kinds of music, they can call it a remake, or, homage – whatever, but I call it felony theft, vandalism and burglary. Worryingly, I allude to Winona Ryder's convictions of theft and vandalism, not of burglary, because intent was not proven. Well, when "remakes" are made, it's done with intent to steal and vandalize.

So, I am bewildered that the extremely talented and respected director, Jonathan Demme, of Philadelphia and Silence of the Lambs fame, has remade the marvelous 1963 thriller-comedy, Charade into The Truth About Charlie. Hadn't he heard the old saw, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it?" Perhaps he wanted to use his naturally enthusiastic style of film making that he had tamed for his two big hits. My personal guess was that he did it as a vehicle for its star, Thandie Newton, who is equal to the A-One quality of the original film and Charade's star, Audrey Hepburn. Thandie's much different from Audrey, beyond even skin pigmentation. Her gamine is sensually sexual in a honey-warm way. She heats up the director's overly "cool" style of hand-held cameras swirling and tripping over jump cuts to too many music needle drops. You feel as if you have to find your way through all the stuff to get to the caper involving a fortune left after the death of the husband of newlywed Newton. She found out that he, Charlie, was not the guy she thought – nor were his friends. She is helped by Mark Wahlberg, but he may be the guy she thinks he is. We do know he is no Cary Grant! I won't belabor my displeasures. After all, the film was shot in Paris (a real Paris) and there is Ms. Newton. She makes the movie pleasurably terrific. That is star stuff and it's not a remake of another star.

Another cannibalization is I Spy, another 1960's success. The producers call it "A based on" of the television series starring Robert Culp and Bill Cosby, in a breakthrough that shattered the old white and white TV screens. Now, it was black and white TV and, in color.

Although the spy-action series did not say very much, one way or the other, it did speak out eloquently through the subtlety and charisma of Cosby. His impact was so strong, his co-star, Culp, quickly adopted Cosby's style, becoming the first "white Negro" (quoting Norman Mailer). In the current "updating" based on I Spy, we find it out-dated. As opposed to the original's precedent breaking production, the current film, starring Eddie Murphy and Owen Wilson, sets the genre and, Mr. Murphy back. Way back. His successful Buddy Movie, 48 Hrs, was big 20 years ago. Though there are laughs generated by Murphy and Wilson, the recycled, over-processed grist is too white bread-thin for Eddie's thick, dripping-over fluidity. Murphy's young, fresh emergence on the scene featured putdown material of Cosby's pale comedy. In the new, I Spy, we can almost see Murphy's guilt leeching through. There just isn't any justice.

theater review: the hobbit

Welcome to Middle Earth as JRR Tolkien's heroic fantasy is brought to life on the stage at the Avram Theatre at Southampton College. Join Hobbit Bilbo Baggins (Bobby Shortle) who leads the Dwarves in their quest to reclaim the stolen treasure, with numerous adventures, under the protection of the powerful Gandalf the Wizard (Christopher Linn).

An engaging balance exists throughout the show between comedic and dramatic scenes. The amusing banter between Bilbo and the Dwarves counters the life threatening predicaments in which they find themselves.

Notable showstoppers in this production include Gollum

(Chuck Novatka) the inner-mountain, lake-dwelling, long-fanged being that the frightened Hobbit must outsmart with riddles lest he be devoured. Gollum's crouching, lithe body movements and hispy-raspy voice underscore his amphibious nature to a chill. Since Hobbitologists know that Gollum is a Hobbit who has metamorphosed over 500 years into his slimy condition, his interaction with Bilbo becomes all the more intriguing. Their wit is well matched. It is here that Bilbo acquires the powerful ring whose mystical properties allow him to become invisible and avoid harm in evading his enemies.

Then there's spectacular golden-winged, fire-breathing Smaug (Anthony Harvey), the dragon who harbors the fabulous and coveted treasures sought after by the Dwarves. The complicated construction of this dragon is a set in itself, complete with beauteous, jewel-toned lights seen as its wings are raised. If brooches of the beast were offered at intermission they would surely sell out. Smaug's awesome specter and voice are as commanding as Oz.

The long robed Gandalf exhibits his own luminary presence as he speaks in rich and powerful tones, reminiscent of Mr. Linn's recent portrayal as MacDuff at Guild Hall.

His long staff is useful in defending the adventurers as he tricks their adversaries along the way.

Battle scenes are difficult to choreograph and stage this well. This production contains many moments from furtive attacks to outright brawls, and these sequences are well placed and paced. The actors contribute their energies and acrobatics to the fullest measure. The entire theatre is utilized making the space seem more intimate as the audience is drawn into the action in this Hobbitorium.

Fierce fighting is balanced by the appearance of the Elvin Queen (Lisa McClusky) and her court. Her large, carved, majestic throne is another tribute to the attention to detail that is the trademark of the Southampton Players.

The costumes are both colorful and convincing as they dress all manner of beings: trolls, elves, spiders, monsters, goblins, dwarves and hobbits. The astonishingly long beards and hair compliment the rich wardrobe. Masks create frightening visages too terrible to describe.

Justin Doty's original musical score completes the special effects of each scene and sustains the drama. Choral and solo vocals lend their own intensity to the story without distracting from it. The musicians' timing is perfectly matched to the action. At one point the mystery is strengthened by the ominous sounds of an Australian Digere-de-do.

Lighting is designed by Benjamin Miller to maximize the mystery of the events unfolding onstage. Far from succumbing to the danger of overly subduing the lighting for the underground scenes, alternating colored gels at key moments highlight the dramatic sequences and greatly enhance the mood. This is further supported with mists rising in smoky overtones.

The curtains are open throughout the show, with deft, smoothly executed set changes. The set, designed by Michael Disher and Joshua Perl, allows action and tableaux at various depths for an illusion of great space. While the areas are defined by craggy structure, the set is softened by vast fabric arches overhead.

There is tremendous talent here. Anthony Harvey brings to Smaug the successes of his impressive career. His credits include editing famous films like Dr. Strangelove, The Spy Who Came in from the Cold, and Lolita as well as directing 12 feature films.

If you saw the Southampton Players' production of A Chorus Line you will recognize actors from that show. And those adorable children! Punctuating the cast with kids as young as eight charms the fantasy and gives the different realms a sense of authenticity.

A Dan's hat off to Michael Disher and Company. They've done it again! Performances: Nov. 15-17 and 22-24; Fridays and Saturdays at 8; Sundays at 5; 287-8480.

theater review: hollywood arms

Accomplished actors Linda Lavin, Michele Pawk, Frank Wood and emerging talents Donna Lynne Champlin and Sara Niemietz work hard, under the masterful direction of Harold Prince, to make Carol Burnett's and daughter Carrie Hamilton's new play Hollywood Arms into emotionally moving theater, but there is something missing. It is one character as the center pivot of the play.

Is it the grandmother Nanny (Lavin), mother Louise (Pawk) or granddaughter Helen (Sara Niemietz as young Helen, Donna Lynn Champlin as older Helen)? Although the play unfolds as a flashback narrated by the older Helen (a pseudonym for Carol Burnett), we never get to know what inner qualities the young Helen has to give her the drive and fortitude to become a success. We see her growing up in a loving but very dysfunctional household, and we are told and shown that she is very talented – but what made a poor girl from the seedy side of Hollywood put herself through UCLA? Did a high school drama teacher inspire her?

Perhaps Ms. Burnett and Ms. Hamilton, when transposing Ms. Burnett's memoir One More Time into the play Hollywood Arms, felt that showing Helen's emotional development into a star would be too im-modest or private to become the center of the play. But that's what is missing – how did the Helen/Carol character overcome her difficult childhood and become a superstar?

There are glimpses of Helen's feelings throughout the play, such as her fear of losing her grandmother or mother when they become ill or her natural ability to overcome stage fright and improvise before an audience, but the playwrights also give equal time to Nanny's drama-queen kvetching and mother Louise's depressed descent into alcoholism. In fact, some of the dialogue between Nanny and Louise sometimes sounds like Burnett's television characters Eunice and Momma – right down to their Midwest/Southern accents.

Some dramatic catharsis comes in the second act when Helen's father Jody, tenderly portrayed by Frank Wood, is near death from alcoholism and tuberculosis but musters the strength to confront his former mother-in-law Nanny: "Why do you have to piss on everyone's dream?" But, again, this brings up this play's weakness: who is the central character in this play – Helen, Louise or Nanny?

Harold Prince marshalls his outstanding leads to make the most of what is written. In addition, Leslie Hendrix as Louise's friend Dixie, Nicolas King as Dixie's son Malcolm, and Patrick Clear as Louise's second husband Bill do admirable work in supporting roles.

The Hollywood Arms is a dingy residence hotel in the shadow of the huge "Hollywood" sign up in the Hollywood Hills. Walt Spangler designed a perfectly run-down apartment set and Judith Dolan's costumes bring back the fashions of 1941 and 1951, the years when each act takes place.

Howell Binkley's lighting reflects the characters' shifting moods in the play, and Rob Milburn and Michael Bodeen handle the sound design well (this is a play with music). Linda Lavin's, Michele Pawk's and Sara Niemietz's voices blend delightfully in the pop standard that brings down the first-act curtain, and Robert Lindsey Nassif has written additional music for the show.

Hollywood Arms plays Tuesday through Saturday evenings plus Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday matinees at the Cort Theatre, 138 West 48th Street. Tickets are available through Tele-charge at 212-239-6200 or 800-432-7250 or online at www.hollywoodarms.com

We Like To Party... We Like To Party

"Ibiza meets the Bowery underneath Bizantine Arches and Gothic Cathedral Ceilings." This was the setting for Heidi Klum's annual Halloween Gala held at Capitale Restaurant in the historic former Greenpoint Savings Bank on Bowery St. This glorious space is the home for Capitale which is an event space and proper restaurant and the new home to many of Manhattan's premier and charitable events.

I was one of the lucky ones invited to this much coveted event and in keeping with the mandatory costumes required for entry, I donned my old stand by Alfred Hitchcock mask and headed downtown. I could feel the "buzz" as soon as I entered and soon found my self face to face with one of the "beautiful people" Naomi Campbell dressed in red from head to toe and Heidi Klum as Betty Boop. Before long I was swept up in the magic of the evening with the parade of costumes and performances by Busta Rhymes and Anti Gravity. The party was a virtual who's who with the arrival of Puffy Combs, Ice T, Jason Sehorn of the N.Y. Giants and David Copperfield. Donegal, of Off Broadway and Woody Allen fame was spotted, as well as top models, Molly Simms and Giselle. The Fellini like atmosphere continued into the night and I reluctantly sipped my last glass of champagne and headed home. Noah Tepperberg and Jason Strauss of Strategic Group pulled out all the stops putting together this entire event and I will, no doubt, be awaiting the next invite from these two talented hosts.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Thanksgiving is such a traditional holiday and most folks I know prefer to stick with those traditions. The festive meal will no doubt begin with a soup made with pumpkin or butternut squash and continue with the turkey in its many guises – brined or not, roasted or deep fried, or for the adventurous, if weather permits – barbecued. There will be side dishes of Brussels sprouts, broccoli, roasted root vegetable or root vegetable purees, cranberry concoctions, sweet potato pies and a myriad of sweet pie desserts. With all of the mouths to feed, emotions can quickly sway from excitement to frantic and frenetic. Time to make that game plan.

While I do not advocate freezing as a rule, much can be done ahead. Fully prepared soups and pastry dough can be successfully frozen and defrosted overnight in the refrigerator. Cranberry sauces stay fresh for several days and fully baked pies can be made up to a day ahead and refrigerated. Vegetable gratin dishes and most stuffing can be prepared a couple of days ahead and warmed for serving. The table is set, the wines selected and that pretty much leaves cooking the turkey on turkey day.

At this time of the year when other vegetables are waning, we welcome the freshness of autumn's bounty of kale and parsnips and the variety of squashes. Kale a member of the cabbage family develops their best flavor and color in the chill of winter. Turnips thrive when it is uniformly cool. The hardened rind of some winter squash such as butternut, acorn and delicata yields a sweeter flesh and are used for both sweet and savory dishes. Hope you will incorporate some these vegetables into your traditional Thanksgiving fare.

KALE WITH CURRANTS

A member of the cabbage family, kale is at its most flavorful, tender and abundant during the winter months. Unlike cabbage it does not form a head but, with its ruffled leaves, resemble instead a huge sprig of curly parsley.

Serves 6-8

1/2 cup currants
1/2 cup orange juice
2 bunches kale, about 2 pounds
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1. Soak currants in orange juice and let stand for 15 minutes. Set aside.

2. Cut off and discard the tough stalks of kale and separate the leaves. Rinse well and drain. Plunge the leaves in boiling salted water and cook at a brisk simmer for 10 minutes. Drain well and cut in large coarse pieces.

3. Heat oil and butter in a large skillet and when butter melts, add the kale and cook for a few minutes, tossing with tongs to coat the vegetable. Season with salt and pepper to taste, add in the plumped currants and orange juice and simmer for a few minutes longer until liquid evaporates. Taste to adjust seasoning and serve warm.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1 and 2 up to several hours ahead. Complete Step 3 before serving.

CARAMELIZED ROOT VEGETABLES

Raves are in store when this winter vegetable root mix is roasted to a crisp sweetness.

Serves 6-8

4 large parsnips
1 bunch carrots
2 large turnips
3-4 ribs celery
3-4 cloves garlic
2-3 sprigs fresh thyme or 1/2 teaspoon dried
1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

1. Peel and trim the vegetables and cut them into chunky pieces of equal size, about 1 1/2 inches.
2. Place vegetables in a roasting pan large enough to hold them. Toss in the garlic, thyme, olive oil and salt and pepper then mix the vegetables with abandon, to coat with the seasonings. Tent with foil for 25 minutes.

3. Transfer to preheated oven and roast for 50 minutes. Turn them once after about 25 minutes, uncover. Sprinkle with balsamic vinegar and serve warm.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1 and 2 up to several hours ahead. Complete step 3 before serving.

CARROT AND BUTTERNUT-SQUASH GRATIN

Serves 6-8

1 1/2 pounds butternut squash, peeled, seeded, diced
3 cups peeled and sliced carrots
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/2 cup chicken stock
1/2 teaspoon cumin
Dash tobasco

Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper

Finely chopped parsley for garnish

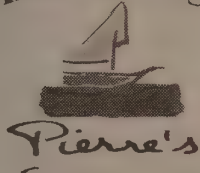

1. Prepare the vegetables for cooking and place in a saucepan with water to cover. Bring to the edge of a boil then simmer over medium heat for 15-20 minutes until tender. Drain the vegetables and transfer to bowl of food processor, fitted with steel knife, or a blender. Add butter and process or blend scraping down sides as necessary. Add broth and seasonings and process or blend to mix to a puree. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.

2. Transfer contents to a lightly buttered gratin dish. Can be done ahead to this point. Refrigerate, covered for up to two days, if prepared ahead.

3. When ready to serve, preheat oven to 350 degrees and bake gratin for 15-20 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Do You Fondue?

At around 4:45 p.m. last Saturday, the feeling hit me; a sleepy-eyed, desire to be at home. It was already dark out. And my urge was to be nowhere else but in my cozy living room, with a fire going and the cold night safely on the other side of my sturdy storm windows. And I wanted all of my friends there with me. I wanted to sit in front of the warm fire's blaze and have a lovely dinner with my closest friends. I thought about the menu to lure my friends, something hearty – that would occupy all of our senses like only wonderful food can do. And I wanted it to be simple.

One of my all time favorite cozy time foods is fondue; I think of the first time I had it in a tiny one-room restaurant in Montmatre. The room was dimly lit so we could barely read the small menu that consisted of only three selections: fromage, viande and chocolat. We all sat at a long wood table, flanked by strangers having as good as a time we were – and I thought it was all wonderful.

A fondue party is an intimate way to bring friends together. It is even a great way to bring some people who do not know each other at all, and engage everyone in an old Swiss peasant tradition. Similar to the famous Swiss/French cheese Raclette, which is made on both sides of the Alps – fondue can be made with Gruyere, Emmenthaler or a blend of the cheeses you fancy.

The preparation is simple – and can be completed before any guests arrive. You can arrange all of your dipping items in little bowls around the fondue pot. Have on hand bottles of wine – a light Alsatian white with the cheese fondue and a earthy red wine.

CLASSIC CHEESE FONDUE

- 1 garlic clove, halved crosswise
- 1 1/2 cups dry white wine

- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 2 teaspoons kirsch (at most liquor stores and markets)
- 1/2 lb Emmentaler cheese, coarsely grated (2 cups)
- 1/2 lb Gruyere, coarsely grated (2 cups)
- 1 baguette cut in cubes
- Assorted vegetables for dipping: gherkins, new potatoes, haricot verts

Rub inside of a 4-quart heavy pot with cut sides of garlic, then discard garlic. Add wine to pot and bring just to a simmer over moderate heat.

Stir together cornstarch and kirsch in a cup. Gradually add cheese to pot and cook, stirring constantly in a zigzag pattern (not a circular motion) to prevent cheese from balling up, until cheese is just melted and creamy (do not let boil). Stir cornstarch mixture into fondue. The cornstarch will thicken the mixture. Bring fondue to a simmer and cook, stirring, to desired thickness, 5 to 8 minutes.

Transfer to fondue pot set over a flame and serve with accompaniments for dipping. Makes 6 servings.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face...with Annette

WHAT'S SO COMMON ABOUT THE COMMON COLD?

As I sit here, huddled up in blankets at the keyboard, I am wondering why "they" call this miserable cold a common one. When it strikes you, it is far from common, and you sit on the edge of your seat thinking it's going to go into a full blown flu. You get the body aches, the chills, the stuffiness and the subsequent dry throat and lips. You get to be one mess! You pop cough drops to ease the dryness of your throat, you try smearing yourself with Vicks, although now they have a great applicator for this type of relief. It comes looking like a stick of deodorant, which supposedly takes care of stuffy noses as well as body aches if you suffer from them as well. You will try anything to get relief.

I am a believer in Advil or Motrin for those aches. Anything else seems to attack my stomach. Mentholated cough drops are the only way to go to open up those passages that seem to be shrinking by the minute. I even found those Listerine Breath tabs a great nose opener. A great product to hit the market in the last couple of years is Zicam. It comes in several formulas, which promises to attack the "common" cold all the way to allergies. The theory behind this product is that cold viruses find their way into out body one way - and that is through the nasal passages.

During the fall and winter, we tend to spend more time indoors, not only in our own homes, but malls and shopping areas. These places are breeding grounds for such germs. Also, the lower humidity during the colder months, help cold-causing viruses to thrive and may dry the lining of the nasal passages making them more susceptible to infection. Clinical studies have proven that Zicam reduces the duration of the cold by 75% when taken at the onset of the illness.

That is some percentage there! I started taking it about a day after I began feeling symptoms and it really does stop the runny nose and congestion. The sore throat even eased up. You have to remember to take this every two hours or so in the beginning or else you begin to feel the cold symptoms creeping back. You insert the tip of the applicator about 1/8" into your nose and give a squirt once up each nostril. You then pinch your nostrils for 5 seconds - resist the urge to sniff it up and have tissues nearby because you will need them. It does start to drip. Within about 10 minutes you can feel it beginning to work. It won't take away the aches so you will have to rely on your Ibuprofen for that. I just took the Zicam and Motrin and I no longer need the blankets. You can pick up Zicam in the cold section of your supermarket or drug-store. It sells anywhere from $10 to $12. You will get approximately 120 metered doses.

Constant blowing the nose and wiping your eyes will leave your skin in these areas dry. Make sure you are using Puffs with AloeVera, anything else will scratch up your already irritated skin. For you lip area, nothing beats Carmex. It comes in a tube, little pot or jar. While you are at it, you can use it at the base of your nose as well. I would hesitate in putting any sort of moisturizer on this area at this time. Perfumes will irritate it.

Eucerin is good but as long as you are using Carmex for your lips, you can do your nose area with it. Cosmetics will flake so be careful when doing your makeup. Try mixing your foundation with a little plain moisturizer like the Eucerin to keep the area hydrated. If you use powder foundations you are only going to succeed in making the area dryer. Try going with a dewy look at this time rather than a matte one. In the eye area, make sure you only use moisturizers for that area. You can mix a little Visine to thin out the cream. Pat gently with your ring finger. It delivers the least amount of pressure.

Eye makeup should be confined to waterproof mascara at this time. You are going to be sneezing and dealing with watery eyes at some point. Any sort of eyeshadow will be smeared from all this. Go with a minimal application of makeup and keep it dewy and you should be able to pull off your cold looking halfway decent. After all, you don't want to look like you have a "common" cold.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

This year has been so busy for us at Long Island Farm Bureau that it's been a blur. Most farmers have finished their season but some farming operations continue until we have a total freeze, where it's not possible to harvest any longer. My friend Phil Schmitt is still harvesting small lettuces. Brad Reeve and the Anderson Farms are still harvesting cauliflower, broccoli and seasonal crops. Most potato farmers have finished harvesting for several weeks but now sell and grade potatoes out of storage. Farmers continue to stay busy until Christmas but maybe not quite as many hours as when the days are longer.

If they are not busy enough on the farm we keep them busy with Farm Bureau, Extension and other organizational meetings. With that said, there has been a lot of activities with farmland preservation, master plan updates in East Hampton and Riverhead, conservation issues and crop protectants. There is enough to keep everyone engaged in public policy discussions.

I too have been extremely busy on a number of fronts. Heading out to Auburn, NY two weeks ago, I attended the New York Association of Conservation Districts annual meeting. This is the forum for District Directors to come together and discuss issues and topics common to districts across the state. Discussions centered on the state budget situation and concern for Soil and Water Districts funding for 2003. At the same time, elections were held and I am pleased to have been elected as President of the Association for the next year. Last week here in Suffolk County the Soil & Water Conservation District was awarded a $130,000 grant for planning for implementation of Agricultural Environmental Management (AEM) projects on farms. The AEM program will help farmers improve upon Best Management practices thereby lessening impacts on the environment and our estuary system. We are very excited that funding is coming our way and to get AEM up and running in the field.

Another interesting event last week was that Dr.

Doug Lawrence, P.H.D. from USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service came to visit from Washington, DC. Doug is the program leader for the Federal Farmland Protection Program and is in charge of that program nationwide. The State Program Manager, Ms. Marilyn Stevenson, our local conservationist Mr. Allan Connell, Suffolk County Planner Mr. Tom Isles, Suffolk County Cornell Cooperative Extension Agricultural Program Director Mr. Bill Sanok and myself met with Mr. Lawrence and toured our farm areas on the North Fork. He wanted to see the type of farming and development pressure we are facing. Our goal was to learn more about the ranking criteria of the federal program so we can build a stronger case for funding our preservation efforts. We need more financial support from both New York State and the federal government in order to preserve the 5000 acres currently before the County and Town programs. We have been making significant progress in voluntary preservation efforts.

As you can tell the farmers and Long Island Farm Bureau are very active in land use and environmental policy issues. It should make winter go by very fast.

Joseph Gergela is Executive Director of Long Island Farm Bureau.

Looking for Firewood?

Look for ALB.

As winter approaches, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cooperative Asian Longhorned Beetle Project will continue to perform tree surveys. During this period, USDA officials would like to remind everyone purchasing firewood or moving wood products in and around quarantine areas to be aware of the dangers of transporting the highly destructive Asian longhorned beetle (ALB).

White, wormlike ALB larvae live deep in the heartwood of trees, and transporting them to areas not currently infested would prove devastating.

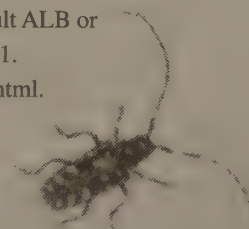

If you have questions concerning the movement of firewood, or have spotted an adult ALB or ALB larvae, please call 1-877-STOPALB or 1-866-265-0301.

For more information, visit www.aphis.usda.gov/oa/alb/alb.html.

Police Blotter

The holidays are near! Reach out and touch someone! Just do it with your own calling card. A Montauk man called police when he realized that someone knew his PIN and was using a calling card that his father had purchased for him in Florida. Police believe an employee of the Florida-based store where the card was bought is making the unauthorized calls.

Another form of stealing goods was reported in Southampton last Sunday. A Hill Station Road resident called police to tell them that someone had stolen a pick-up truck from their driveway. While cops were at the residence gathering details, the thief, a 23 Southampton woman, returned with the vehicle. She was arrested and charged with felony grand larceny in the fourth degree after telling police that she just borrowed the truck to go to the dump.

A Springs woman told police that it may have been a guest who stole $1500 in silver wear from her home. The suspect was left alone in a room with the knives and forks just after the woman removed them from a locked chest.

At about 2 a.m., Sunday morning, a pair of double-daters (two men, two women) left a great time at the Star Room in Wainscott only to be attacked in the parking lot. Through questioning the attacked, police gathered that the suspects had been talking to the two women inside, but when they left, the suspects followed them outside and attacked the two men. One victim suffered a broken jaw and the other received 50 stitches to one of his ears. Police are currently investigating.

A real estate agent was victimized this week in East Hampton after her day planner, hand bag and a stack of real estate documents and surveys were taken from her car as it sat parked on Main Street. The location, location, location of her belongings is unknown.

On the brighter side of missing belongings, a surfer in Montauk reported a bucket containing a fishing vest and his wallet stolen from the beach. Oddly enough, the man received a call from the person who had picked up his stuff. The caller told him that he thought the items were stolen already and wanted to return them to the proper owner. What a good guy.

This next item reinforces the severe shopping situation in the Hamptons around the holidays. An employee called police after a customer got a bit out of hand over a minor "problem." The cashier said that when the woman was denied her request for a plastic bag, she "became verbally abusive and grabbed her arm."

Dan's Letters

AND NOW A WORD FROM OUR SPONSORS

Dear Dan,

As a new Councilperson for the Town of Southampton, I have tried to involve the entire community in solving issues that confront us as a Town.

Today, I am writing to you and other fellow citizens to bring to your attention a vitally important issue for the hamlets of Bridgehampton and Sagaponack. I refer to the historic parcel of property on the southeast corner of Montauk Highway and Ocean Road. This prime piece of real estate, known as the Hopping property, is considered to be important to the town by many townspeople I've talked to. Yet unless we can find a way for the Town to acquire it, the land will be sold to developers and the opportunity to convert it into attractive community space such as a park or village green will be lost forever. While developers are putting increased pressure on the site's owner to sell the parcel, I have negotiated an option with the owner that gives us a limited time in which to arrange for a purchase of the land by the Town. But we need your help.

As indicated by the attached data sheet, the owner is willing to sell for $3.1 million. The Town's appraisal indicates a value of $2.5 million, leaving a shortfall of $600,000. The Town cannot pay more than the appraisal price for the property, as per the Town Attorney.

In order to make up the $600,000 shortfall, I am requesting that area residents contribute into a tax-deductible situation that will enable the Town to purchase this parcel. If the Town uses Community Preservation Funds for the purchase, any future use will be restricted. Most likely, the property would be used as a Hamlet Green. The Town would be responsible for its maintenance and upkeep.

I thank you in advance for your consideration. A number of these letters are being sent. Time is of the essence. It is my hope that you will call me in the next few days to offer assistance. If I don't hear from you, I will take the liberty of calling you in the next few weeks, or someone from the forthcoming committee will. Do participate if you can. Every time you pass the corner, remind yourself of what it could become.

I thank you in advance for your consideration.

Dennis A. Suskind
Councilman,
Southampton

This is an excellent idea. —D.R.

IT STILL AIN'T CHEAP

Dear Dan,

I really enjoyed reading Dan's Rattiner's article entitled Help Is On The Way, describing some of the programs that LIPA is proposing to deal with the increased used of electricity here on Long Island.

I think that people in Montauk and throughout Long Island need to recognize the fact that the use of electricity on the Island is growing at an extraordinary pace. This past summer, in fact, we sold 10% more electricity than we sold last summer, which is unheard of anywhere in the country. And, we have to have enough electricity to make sure that we keep the lights on.

LIPA just released a new Energy Master Plan, which proposes a variety of ways to deal with the need to provide more electricity to meet our needs. Energy efficiency and new technologies like wind, solar and fuel cells should lead the way. But, we will also need additional links to Long Island along with new generation if we are to meet the rapidly growing needs of all Long Island.

I would hope that people in Montauk through the Hamptons would be receptive to some of these projects — in particular our proposal to build an offshore wind project to provide Long Island with 100 megawatts of clean, cheap wind energy. Windmills are wonderful for the environment and do not in any way threaten the fishing industry or anyone else. If we can't build windmills or power plants, then everything will go dark and we won't be able to survive.

Let me make one final point. Your article indicates that the cost of electricity on Long Island is the highest in the nation. This is simply not true. Yes, under LILCO our electric rates were the highest in the nation. However, since Governor Pataki implemented the LIPA takeover of LILCO, our electric rates actually are the second lowest in New York State, and we will continue to explore ways to bring them down even further.

Richard M. Kessel
Chairman, LIPA
Uniondale

Just don't let the electricity get in the water and zap people. —D.R.

GET ON A ROLL

Dear Dan,

This letter is really for David in regard to his article about roller blading in Central Park. I want David to know that together Dan's Papers & Linda Shapiro will be coordinating the first annual "Rolling to Recovery", a roller blading event to benefit colon cancer education and research. The event will include Katie Couric's charity, the National Colorectal Cancer Research Alliance (NCCRA), as one of the two beneficiaries. The proposed date for the event is Sunday, July 20th David, so don't put away those roller blades just yet! So save the date and watch where you're going!

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE RABBIT EARS?

Dear Dan,

Thanks for the fireworks!

Why your satellite TV is slower than your cable TV: The cable is probably analog. What comes into the camera goes straight out to you. The satellite is digital. The picture and sound have to be converted from analog to digital. In the process they are also compressed by a factor of 10 to 100 times. This ain't easy. I'm surprised that the delay is only ten seconds (as proved by the now famous Rattiner baseball project of 2002).

Yes, Cablevision can rightly claim to be faster, but DirectTV is not delivering 90 percent of the picture and sound you paid for, and taking ten seconds to dispose of it!

My guess is that you would get an even worse delay if you watched a set fed by Tivo. How about testing the Tivo lag for the Superbowl.

WE'RE INDEPENDENT

Dear Dan,

Love your paper. Did have the opportunity to read your essay on Tolls: Why Do You Have to Pay to Cross On Some Bridges But Not on Others? The politician you quoted is incorrect. He states: "Mayor Giuliani was a Republican. Mayor Bloomberg is a Democrat." Actually, Mayor Bloomberg WAS a Democrat, but he did switch to the Republican Party, and was elected Mayor... as a Republican.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 2002 @ 7PM FISH! PHILOSOPHY: A FORMULA FOR SUCCESS If living life to its fullest is one of your goals, we have the perfect workshop for you! The FISH! Philosophy is based on the activities at the Pikes Place Fish Market in Seattle, Washington. The energy, fun, passion and success these fishmongers experience are a lesson to all in work and in life. We will discover their formula for a full life; take a quick visit to see them in action in Seattle and practice adopting their principles to our own lives. Leesa LeClaire has turned twenty years of hands-on operational management experience and a passion for improving individual and team performance into becoming a strong facilitator capable of "cutting through" issues to get to the root cause of any challenge she encounters. $15.00 Serena Gagliotti, Ross School, Center for Well Being, Bldg#5, 20 Goodfriend Drive, East Hampton 631.907.5105 fax
